Digitized by the Internet Archive in 2010 with funding from University of Pittsburgh Library System A TESTIMONY from our Monthly Meeting at Wainfleet, in the County of Lincoln, concerning our deceased Friend WILLIAM RECKITT.

HIS our worthy friend was born in the year 1706, with-in the compass of Gainsborough monthly meeting, of parents pro-fessing truth, who died when he was young. His friends put him apprentice to a weaver belonging to the same monthly meeting, with whom we believe he ferved his time faithfully, and then came to live near Partney Mills, within the compass of our monthly meeting. After fome time, about the year 1742, it pleased the Lord to call him into the work of the ministry: his appearance from the first was in the life and wisdom of Truth, which nearly united him to his friends. Soon after he removed to Wainfleet particular meeting; and some time after he visited friends in the West of England, and Wales, &c. and at different times many other counties; also Ireland once with our friend Samuel Stott. He was twice in America: the first time he fet forward in the year 1756, and, it being in the time of war, was taken prisoner into France, and confined about fix months, which he bore with Christian fortitude (as some of us have heard him fay) and got well home to his family in the beginning of the year 1757, where he staid about four weeks, and then again fet forward for his intended vifit. He afterwards found a weighty concern to vifit his friends friends in some part of America again; all which vifits, by fundry accounts received, were much to friends satisfaction, as well as his own: and indeed it may be truly faid, he was deep in the ministry, and powerful in prayer, his testimony found, and edifying, which rendered him very near, and valuable to many. He was grave in conversation, yet innocently chearful amongst his friends; an affectionate husband, and a tender parent. We think it needless to enlarge concerning him, as he was well known to many friends; only we may, with fincerity of heart, fay, his removal is much regretted in general. In the latter end of 1768, he had drawings in his mind to vifit London, and parts adjacent; in which he told some of his near friends, he thought it might be the last time.

He returned home in the first month, in the year 1769, but poorly in health, and continued fo; but mostly attended his own meeting, where he had feveral weighty testimonies (which had more than usual influence over the hearers, leaving lasting impressions on their minds) as well as at times in private conversation, wherein he fignified he was willing to leave all these transitory and fading enjoyments, whenever it might please the Lord to call him from works to rewards.

His illness was very short; he was taken with a fit of the ague the day before his departure, and next morning, about four o'clock, exchanged this life, we make no doubt, for a better, the fixth of the fourth month 1769, and was buried the 9th of the same in friends burying ground at Wainfleet.

INTRODUCTION.

OUR late worthy friend WIL-LIAM RECKITT, whose journal follows, was one whom the Lord was pleased to prepare for his service; and having in a good degree experienced the work of righteousness to be peace, he was engaged, under the influence of divine love, to call to others to come, taste, and see how good the Lord is.

His life and conversation were innocent, and consistent with his profession, and, in the exercise of his ministry, he was attended with that love which seeks the good of all.

As

As the following journal commences only with his voyage to America, a short account of him, of the work of truth on his mind, and of his services before he embarked for America, seems not improper.

He was born at Lea near Gainfborough in Lincolnshire, about the year 1706, of parents professing truth; his mother died when he was young, and his father being through infirmities rendered incapable of supporting his children, he was bound by friends at nine years of age, until he arrived at twenty-one, as an apprentice to a weaver; which proved a laborious servitude, his master being in low circumstances. course of his service his master let him out to harvest work, in which employment his industry gained him the confidence of the farmer farmer that employed him, who thought it unnecessary to look after him, faying, "William was " a faithful fervant;" as he was to his master to the end of his apprenticeship. During which time he was reached by a divine visitation, through the ministry of a friend on a religious visit, whose testimony (as he has been heard to relate) clearly answered the witness of truth in his own heart, and fully confirmed him, that the principles of friends were confonant with the Holy Scriptures; and he then thought there would be none fo void of understanding, as not to be convinced by the fame powerful declaration of the true Christian faith. It left a lasting impression on his mind; an hunger and thirst after righteousness were begotten in his foul; and by a diligent attention to the dictates thereof, he experienced preferva-B 2

tion from the many temptations, which unguarded youth are exposed to. About the eighteenth year of his age, the death of an only fifter, a virtuous young woman, who had been particularly kind to him, nearly affected him; and an only brother, by giving way to the vanities of the world, was drawn afide, and left the fociety. These events impressed his mind with deep forrow and humiliation; but feeling the pre-ferving hand of divine goodness manifested for his support, he was engaged to live near thereto, by which he was mercifully preferved.

Soon after the expiration of his apprenticeship, he removed into the compass of Wainsleet monthly meeting in Lincolnshire, where he followed the business of a weaver, and increased in the esteem of his friends; being a man who laboured to be in reality what he professed. In the year 1731, he entered into the marriage state with Ellin Maw, a sober and virtuous young woman, who was an affectionate wife to him, and tender mother to their children: he survived her, she dying during his absence on his second visit to America.

About the thirty-sixth year of his age, he sirst appeared in the ministry to the satisfaction of friends, and laboured diligently in his own and some neighbouring meetings for the advancement of truth; and after some time, in company with Robert Kinsley, he visited the churches in Essex; and about the latter end of 1745, in company with the same friend, also visited the city of London; and his service in this visit is still remem-

remembered by fome with brotherly regard and affection.

In 1746, he visited the West of England, and part of Wales; and in 1752, in company with Samuel Stott of Edmundsbury, he vifited Ireland, to his own and friends comfort and satisfaction, and returned home with peace of mind. In 1756, he visited Yorkshire; soon after which, in the course of his religious labours, he found himself engaged to visit the churches in the American plantations, the enfuing account whereof will best inform the reader of his progress therein.

It is not intended to magnify the creature, by any thing which may be faid concerning this our deceased friend; but to shew the reader, that such as believe in, and live near to, the divine principle ciple of truth in their own hearts, convey an evidence to the minds of those who behold them: for he being taken in his paffage by a privateer (England being then at war with France) and carried into Morlaix, was there detained in a painful state of captivity, yet was preserved in great quietness and refignation, to the admiration of fome of the French inhabitants; one of whom, in a letter to a person residing in London, mentioned his inoffenfive lamb-like behaviour, in terms of great respect, and when he was removed to Carhaix, recommended him to a person of account, a member of the parliament of Brittany, who likewise testified his regard to him. The kindness he received from these persons moderated his captivity, though he had many exercises there, which often brought him

[xvi]

very low; yet, he found support and prefervation, as he acknowledged in his letters, in one of which, after having noted how he had been helped, and expreffing his care for his future pre-fervation, he fays: " My fears " have all been concerning my-" felf, for furely I never faw more " of my own weakness, it hath " indeed been a fearching time to " me; and yet it springs in my heart to say, If the Lord hath " any delight in me, he will " bring me safe through all; he " knows the integrity of my heart: I did not set out in a forward fpirit, but in his counsel, and in it at this time I stand; he knows best what will be most " for his own honour. And as " to what will become of this " earthly tabernacle, it feems to " be the least of my care, so

"that I may finish my course with joy."

After being detained about five months, he was released through the kindness of a person in England, who, having received very favourable impressions of him through the French merchant before mentioned, recommended him to the fecretary of the fick and wounded office (they having the care of fuch as were prisoners), and after a short stay at home, finding the engagement remain, he returned to London, attended the yearly meeting, and, with the concurrence of friends, proceeded on his voyage, of which the following is his own relation.

LIFE AND TRAVELS

O F

WILLIAM RECKITT.

Some account of what befel me in my first voyage towards America.

AVING parted with several friends who accompanied me to Gravesend, the sisteenth of the tenth month 1756, I went on board the ship Lydia, Joseph Riddell master. We had three passengers besides myself, who seemed to be very sober men, and carried themselves very loving to me, as likewise did all our common men; though I often reproved them for swearing, and their bad language to one another. The 20th we came into the Downs, but the wind not being fair, we lay there till the 22d, when the wind coming more favourable, we weighed anchor.

It may not be amiss to mention the great exercise and weight that rested upon my spirit while we lay here, I then not seeing the cause of it. When I looked forward, I could see little further than the Land's End, and I cried in my mind that we might be carried, or driven to Ireland; for then I thought I should get safe to my journey's end: but not seeing it would be so then, I only desired we might put into Plymouth, which I mentioned to the captain, and he told me, he thought he would. But the wind coming fair, and a strong gale, he was willing to make the best of it. We outfailed two ships which came from the Downs with us, one a privateer called the St. Olive, from London;

the other a Guineaman. The 24th, about ten in the morning, we came abreaft of Plymouth, with a very fine wind. In the evening, as I fat in the cabin, fomething opened in my mind concerning my own prefervation, which I thought fomewhat strange; but foon faw a cause for it. For about eight o'clock next morning, the mate came down and told his master, there was a French snow just aftern of us, which, to our forrow, was too true, for she was then within reach of us with her guns. I thought it was a great neglect of our mafter, and the failors, that they did not keep a strict look-out; for they acknowledged, if they had but had a few hours more, they should not have been taken. But then it was too late, they could not get their fails all properly bent, as they would have done, if due pre-caution had been taken. The shot coming over us, I was afraid for our men.

During the little time we were chased, the chief care our captainfeemed

feemed to take, was to fave what he had, fo he kept pretty much in the cabin, till his men called very earnestly for him to come upon deck. Then he ordered them to strike, and in a little time the Frenchmen came and boarded us with great fury. I was in the cabin, and stood still, some of them looking at me very four and fierce, but like fo many hungry ani-mals, they fell to hunting and fearch-ing for what they could find, till they durst not stay much longer. One of them coming to me, in a fawning manner, faid, Sir, I defire you would give me your money, and watch, and I will give you them again. I told him I had not much, and did not chuse to part with it. But he growing very earnest to have it, I turned myfelf about, and took three guineas out of my purse, two of which I carried on shore, and gave him the remainder. He looked at it, and seemed not sa-tissied; but the officers being in haste to get us all into the boat, I was had upon deck. When I looked at the sea, I thought it seemed as though I fhould Lynu should not escape with my life; therefore refolved to ftay on board our veffel, if I might, and went down again into the cabin; but in a little time was fetched out, and commanded to get into the boat. The fear of death was then taken away, and I was resolved to do the best I could to get in. One of our failors handed me a rope, but it was fo short, I was forced to let go, not knowing whether I should fall into the sea, or boat; for the sea ran very high, and two of our men were loft during the short time I had been below. They were getting into the boat when I was feized with fear, and I faw it was not groundless; for had I then proceeded to get in, I should in all probability have been drowned. For as foon as I had turned my back to go down into the cabin, the gunwale of the ship took the boat side, and had like to have funk her, and the two poor men were cast out, the loss of whom forrowfully affected my mind; and the imminent danger I had been in, with a sense of the Lord's goodness and mercy in preferving me at that time, time, brought me very low, in humble thankfulness for so great a deliverance, looking upon it as a mark of his tender care and fatherly regard for so poor a creature as I am.

When we came up to the French ship, our men assisted me in getting on board, and led me through a croud of such creatures, as I thought were more like brutes than men; but they offered me no violence. When I came into the cabin, I was placed behind a large chest of arms, which was their table; where I sat for several hours, very still, and laboured to get to such a right and true composure of mind, that I might be enabled to undergo, with patience, what was then befallen me.

The hurry about the booty being pretty much over, towards night they came to fettle in the cabin; and feeing me take little notice of what they either faid or did, they looked earneftly at me, and asked our captain who I was. He told them I was a Quaker minister, minister, and intended for Pennsylvania, They made many fine speeches, and told me, I was welcome to any thing they had, and would have me call for what I wanted. When meat came to table, they invited me to eat; but I told them I was not for eating, my appetite being quite gone. When they thought it was time for us to go to bed, I was had down into the hold, which was fo close, and the hammocks hung fo near to one another, I was forced to creep on my hands and knees, till I came to that I was to lodge in. The young man that conducted me was one of the officers, and I understood he put me in his own hammock. As he was making it fit, I thought he feemed to do it with a very good will; but the place being strait, and I lying in all my clothes, made it hard work for me to get in. However, he staid and helped me what he could, till I was fettled in my new lodging. A few hours after I had plenty of company. As they crept under me they lifted me up, and when they were all placed in their respective lodgings, I perceived fome lay upon the boards under me. However, the closeness of the place, and the disagreeable smell, with a fear which then feized my mind, that thefe creatures would do me fome mischief, had like to have quite overfet me, fo that I was nigh fainting away, and ready to query, whether I should live till morning. In this great strait the Lord appeared for my help. I senfibly felt strength administered, and it arose in my mind, that those I was afraid of would not hurt me. I believed it was the truth, and in a little time, being much wearied, I fell into a found fleep till morning. When I came upon deck, our poor men came to me, and complained of their hard lodgings, and what was worfe, the thoughts of a close imprisonment when they should come on shore. It made me forrowful to hear their complaints, for they had heard the prisoners fared very poorly. I spake as comfortably as I could, and exhorted them to live in the fear of the Lord. This day we came up with a veffel bound for Plymouth, taken from the French by one

one of our ships of war. The French foon brought her to, boarded her, and brought all the men to us but one. The two officers were had into the cabin where we were. The captain being a man of very strong passions, to be taken prisoner was almost more than he could bear: When they were fate down, I faw he was almost overcome with grief, which I a little wondered at. After some time I went and fat by him, and faid I would not have him too much cast down; trouble and disappointment happened to all men, and this was what fuch men as he might reasonably expect. He said nothing as I remember, but foon went out, and after a while came again with a Frenchman along with him, who could speak English, and pretended great friendship to me, and requested that I would go along with him and the captain into a private place, for he was defirous to have some discourse with me. It did not feem to fuit my inclination, but through their much importuning me, I went. When we were fettled, the Englishman told me, he D 2

he had been attended with misfortunes' even from his childhood, and thought he had been in a fair way of making his fortune, but he had met with this difappointment, which was like to be a great loss to him. He then began to talk about religion, and expressed a great defire in his heart to live in the fear of the Lord. He spoke highly of the ceremonies used amongst them, mentioning baptism with water, and bread and wine, which they call the facrament. I told him we were not in the practice of using them, be-lieving such ceremonies not to be ef-fential to salvation. He said I was a strange man, but finding myself not at all disposed to have any farther discourse at that time, I defired to withdraw.

I was much favoured with stillness, and a sweet composure of mind, which to my great comfort, I found did strengthen and fortify me against the affaults of the enemy, which I met with both inwardly and outwardly. When I looked at my present situation, and what was likely likely to be the consequence, fearing I might be a stumbling-block in the way of many, and bring dishonour to Truth, I was much cast down, and did often cry, "Lord, if I had been " worthy, thou wouldit have preferved " me out of the hands of fuch un-" reasonable men." But the good Shepherd of Ifrael did cast his mantle of love over me, and stilled my crying, fo that I was in a good degree made willing to submit to what he should fee meet to fuffer to come upon me. Whilft I was here, fervent and strong defires were in my heart for those I had left behind me, in many places, that they might be preserved in the fear of the Lord. As to outward food, I eat very little feveral days. Many faid, I thould be fick, and often intreated me to eat; but I did not eat much, till I found I could take it both with freedom of mind, and a good appetite, which had been quite gone. The Frenchmen, as I frequently walked upon deck amongst them, were become milder, and never offered to do me any harm, except one at the firft, first, and he was prevented from hurting me. I also sat, and walked often upon quarter deck, the officers all looking on me with a pleasant countenance, except the captain, who, I suppose, took offence at my not conforming to them when they went to prayers, which was twice a day.

One evening, as we were fitting in the cabin, a young Frenchman asked the man of war's captain before mentioned (pointing at me) concerning our principles. He told him, we were a ftrange people; we both difowned baptism and the Lord's supper. The Frenchman looked at me with disdain, and then began to speak much in behalf of both, laying great stress, especially upon the latter; for he seemed a very zealous young man for their way. Then both joining, they came to a conclusion, that those who were not in the practice of them, could not be faved. Their discourse was in Latin, and though I am not a Latin scholar, I understood so much, that I gathered the purport of their discourse. When they

they had done, I told the captain, he had done very wrong, in mifrepre-fenting the people called Quakers to that man. He asked, in what? I told him, I understood he had been telling him we disowned baptisin, and the supper. He said, he understood by me, that we did not own the facraments. I told him, there was no fuch word made use of in scripture, that I knew of; but baptism and the sup-per were, and we owned and believed both to be effential to falvation. My mind was then opened concerning baptism, in the several passages of scripture, which strengthen and confirm it, that the baptism, which is faving, must needs be spiritual; and if so, then no need of water: for the apostle saith, " One Lord, one faith, " one baptifm," Eph. iv. 5. and that themselves owned water to be but an outward and visible fign of an inward and spiritual grace. I was led on, till I came to that last supper or paffover, which our Lord did partake of with his disciples; and told them what our Lord then said to his disciples.

ciples, was, " As often as ye do this, " do it in remembrance of me, to " fhew forth my death until I come." This was no commandment to perpetuate that outward supper, or passiver; that being a Jewish ordinance, which he then had nigh finished, when he nailed the hand-writing of ordinances to his cross. But I told them, they might see in the Revelations of John, what he faid concerning his coming, where he faith, "Behold I stand at "the door, and knock; and if any " man hear my voice, and open the door, I will come in to him, and "fup with him, and he with me." Rev. iii. 20. It is this fupper and coming we own, and in our measure partake of; for this was the commu-nion of the faints. Several scriptures opening then in my mind to confirm that baptism and supper, which are saving, to be spiritual; and as bodily exercise prositeth little, so that which is only outward and elementary, could not profit the foul. They heard me very patiently, and did not make any objections. Being pretty eafy, I left them them to have their discourse to themfelves, that the officer might have opportunity to inform the man what I had said.

Now our confinement at fea was nigh over, but as we came nigh in with the shore, we were chased by an English man of war, who came fast up with us, and gave our men great expectations of being released; and indeed the Frenchmen expected no other than to be taken. Every man prepared himself for removing, and was in great fear; but we were fo near the rocks, the man of war durst follow us no farther, only gave us one shot, which came over us, and then sheered off. The great expectation our men were in of being retaken being disappointed, made them more forrowful than before; but it did not much affect me, for I was now more reconciled in my mind, to bear with pati-ence what the Lord should see meet to try me with. I had strongly defired before not to go to France, but in a few hours we came into a finall harbour, with a fort at the entrance, and in it one ship of war. We did not land till next morning. This night I met with something that was very unpleasant to me, for the captain going on shore, and the men thinking all secure, when night came on, most of them went to rest; but the man of war's captain, and fome of his men, as it afterwards appeared, had confulted about cutting the veffel out of the harbour. We had more liberty given this night than we had before. The two man of war's men, our captain, and myself, were ordered to lie in the cabin. Riddell had lain in it before, but now he was to lie in the captain's hammock, being a favourite, and I in his bed; but he not accepting of it, I got in. This I perceived gave great offence, therefore, to prevent turther trouble, I foon quitted it, and fat me down by the man of war's captain who had been as in the latter than the man of war's captain who had been as in the latter trouble. tain, who had got to writing.

I had by this time contracted fuch an intimacy with him, that I could make bold to fee what he was writing, without without giving him any offence; and when I came to fee what he was writing, and found it was only to fpend time, it gave me fome uneasiness, for it then began to be late. I did not suddenly say any thing to him, but took notice of his motions and looks, and faw his countenance was very much discomposed. All began now to be very still. None were up in the cabin but him and myself, and the young Frenchman before-mentioned, who kept guard, and he had no weapon in his hand. I asked the captain if he was not for bed. He faid, he could not go to bed. I then told him, I would not have him think of making any attempts to take the veffel out of the harbour. He faid, he should make no difficulty of it, if he had any body to stand by him. I signified, I thought it could not be done without much blood-shedding, if at all; and I should be very forry to fee any thing of thatkind, though my liberty was as dear to me as any of theirs. He faid, I need not be afraid; no body would hurt me. I told him, that was more E 2 than he knew; for as I had been with them all the evening, they would think I had a hand in the plot, and fo I might lose my life undeservedly.

I laid before him all the difficulties I was capable of, as that of lying under the fort, and their man of war a little distance off, with a very rocky harbour to get out of; all which seemed to have but little effect on him. So I thought it was best to consult my own fafety; for if there was a skirmish, I should, if I staid there, be in the midst of it. So I went down to my old lodgings; but could find no reft for my body, my mind being very uneasy. I therefore crept out again, all being still in the ship, and but few upon deck. I went into the cabin, where I found them as I left them; but having a little more courage than before, I told the captain I was refolved to hinder any disturbance, if I could; adding he furely was not in his right fenses to think of any such thing, as his men, I supposed, knew nothing of it. He faid I was mistaken, for for he had told one or two of them in the evening, and they would acquaint all the rest, and he could have them all up in a few minutes.

It was now about midnight, and his men, I fuppose, thinking it high time to get to work, came upon deck without calling, and seemed to be in high spirits, for they talked chearfully, and, I thought, gave feveral fignals to their mafter, that they were ready. I was in a great strait how to act, but thought it would be best to endeavour to keep peace if I could, having said as much as was necessary. I therefore fat me down close by him, with an intent to lay hold of him if he offered to take up a weapon, which was very nigh at hand. Great strugglings were in his mind, as he himself afterwards confessed. He often was just upon the point; but the Lord, in his great mercy, did interpose, and my mind began to be calm and still, and all sear was taken away. I then looking at him, faw his countenance became more composed and folid. I asked him if he would

would not go to bed. He threw down his pen, and faid he would. The young Frenchman fat by all this time, but perceived nothing of their defign.

The night was pretty far spent, and the men, who had walked the deck a confiderable time, thinking nothing would be done, went down to their beds; and when I had feen the mafter settled in his, I lay me down upon a bulk head of the ship, which was so narrow, I could only lie upon my side: there being nothing better in the cabin that I could find. But my mind being easy, after the pain it had been in, I fell afleep. It was a very cold night, and the partition of our cabin was but canvais. When I awaked I was stiff, but I did not take cold. The Lord was pleafed to preferve me, though I often faid in my mind, I did not think myself worthy, and more especially because he had suffered this great exercise to come upon me; which, I feveral times was made fensible, would have been a light matter with him to have hindered, if he had feen meet. I often cried cried to him in the fecret of my heart, that if there was any iniquity lodging in me, he would be pleafed to take it away; and if this my going was not confiftent with his will, that he would be pleafed to shew me how, and wherein I have miffed my way; that I might not bring a reproach upon the Truth, and a trouble and exercise upon his people. It was not long we had to stay amongst this fort of company, for by that time the fun was up, the captain, with feveral more fuch as himfelf, came aboard; also two of their friars in their odd fort of dress; I suppose to see what they could get in the scramble.

When breakfast was over, as several of us were to be searched before they took their leave of us, those appointed to do that business staid in the cabin. The captain and several others went out, and I amongst the rest, but was soon called in again, for they searched me one of the first. When I came in, they told me, they wanted my money. I said not much to them, but thought if they had it they should take it from me; fo they began to fearch me, and took what they could find (which was but one guinea in money) and all other things they found about me of any value; but my wearing clothes they gave me again. When they had fearched me as long as they thought fit, they let me go, but they were not contented, for they had got it into their minds that I had a confiderable fum of money, and a gold watch; therefore I was no fooner gone out, but they fetched me in again, and I was fearched in every part where they thought any money could be concealed. I was fo grieved with them, I could not hold my peace, but faid, they pretended to be gentlemen, and men of honour, but now they did not appear to be fuch; for it was good works which made men truly honourable; and as to what they could do to me, I faid, I was not afraid of. Indeed, all fear was taken away from me: I did not feem afraid of my life, but whether I did well in telling them so, I afterwards queried; for I thought that that courage was only given me for my own support, and not to lavish away at that rate. However, I came off pretty well, for they let me put on and carry away as many clothes as served to keep me warm.

We were on board eleven days, and then were landed near a town called Roscone. When we came to it, many people were gathered to fee us, amongst whom was a mixture of black coats: two of them came to me, and one taking hold of my sleeve, asked me, as I supposed, what religion I was of, and whether I could speak Latin. told them, as I was a prisoner, they had no business with me, and I did not incline to have any difcourse with them; therefore defired they would not ask me any more questions. They turned off, faying, He is for no controverfy. If I had been asked an honest question concerning the hope that is in me, I believe I should have had an answer according to Truth; but pearls ought not to be cast before fwine.

F As

As foon as I had got quit of the two priests, there came a man to me, who feemed to be of fome confiderable account in the world, and faid, he was forry to fee me there; but it was the fortune of war. He wished me fafe in England again. He went to one of his acquaintance who lived in the town, and after some discourse, he came and invited me and Riddel, with the other two, to his house, and set before us fuch as they had, and defired us to eat and drink. There was also a woman in the house, much concerned about our having to walk to Morlaix that night, which was twelve miles, and fent to hire horses, but none were to be had. She therefore gave strict charge to the soldiers that conducted us, to hire horses at the next place, and she would pay the charge. I wish many may follow her example in being kind to strangers; for what she did I thought was of great service to me. The soldiers hired horses for four of us when we came to the next town, which was four miles. This town was pretty large, and there were were many spectators. That they might have a full view of us, the soldiers had us into a convenient place, and stood round us at a little distance. The people gathered so thick, they could scarce stand one by another; and in this posture they kept us about half an hour. Then they had us to an inn, where we were put into a large chamber, and meat and drink were set before us. But before we were well sat down, several men and women of the upper rank came in; the rabble stayed mostly below.

Whilft we were at meat, fome of them turned up my coat laps, and examined what my clothes were made of as well as they could, and commended them for being good. They feemed not to take fo much notice of any as they did of me; often pointing at me, faying, I was a minifter, a prieft. Several gay women fat behind the table, where they had opportunity to look at me as much as they pleafed. They were very light and airy, which I shewed some dislike to, and told them had heard the French used F 2 good good manners, and knew how to behave well; but it could not be faid fo of them, for it was not good manners to come into our room without leave, and when they were in, not to behave foberly and well. I foon perceived I had an interpreter, for fome among them understood English, and informed the rest; upon which they left the room, and it was soon pretty clear. After them came in several young men, who both looked and behaved well. I had nothing in my mind against being free, and looking pleasantly on them; for this, when seasonable, hath a good effect.

The next place we came to of any account was Morlaix; it was night when we got in, and we were obliged to stand and sit in the street, till they got orders from the commissary what to do with us. I thought the time very long, more on account of our poor men than myself; for they had walked till they sweated, and some of them were ill. To sit in the street an hour or more, in a cold night, I thought was almost enough to give them their death.

death. When orders came, they were to take us to prison; but a merchant, one Forney, who was agent of the prizes, met us in the street, and took Riddel, the two man of war's men, and myself, to a tavern, where we had what we pleased to call for, but not at the cheapest rate. Our landlord was an Irishman, and I perceived had a very good opinion of himself.

After we had supped, and he had informed himself what I was, he entertained us with a dish of as unsavoury discourse about religion as I thought I had ever heard, and what made it more irksome, he held it very long. He fetched a book, out of which he faid he taught his children, and as he read, fome of our people were fo weak as to commend it, which made him more eager. I do not remember that I either answered any of his questions, or made any objections to what he said; but when he told me, he intended to bring fome of my brethren to fee me, meaning the priefts, for he faid they would like to have some difcourse with me; I told him he need not bring any there upon my account for I did not want any of their company: fo that was put an end to, for they never came to me while I staid in Morlaix. Whilst I was here, the young man came to fee me, who took care of me the first night I lodged aboard the privateer, and faluted me in a very friendly manner. This young man took more notice of me than any other all the time I was aboard, and when they were stripping and fearching me, he stamped upon the deck, and shewed great refentment, as Riddel told me, and knowing he had not wronged me, could chearfully come to fee me; but the others, who had, did not care to fee me, and though I often met them in the street, they endeavoured to shun me, and would not look me in the face if they could avoid it. I thought it was a brave thing to have a conscience void of offence both towards God and men.

We were brought before one of their chief officers, called the commiffary, to have our names entered, and fuch as could not find bail, must go to prison. This man and his wife took great offence at my hat being in its place, as likewise did the com-missary at Roscone, who was an old man, and ill of the gout, upon his bed. But several capital people of the town being present, he was much dis-pleased, because I did not give them that honour which was none of their due. When I had given in my name, I foon quitted the room. This commissary was a young man, and several were in the room with him. I had not asked any body to be bail for me, for I was easy, and the thoughts of the prison did not terrify me, though we had heard a very dismal account of it; however Forney, whom I mentioned before, after he had called Riddel afide, and asked him concerning me, ventured to be bail for me. I staid a little while in the room after our people were withdrawn, and looked at the great man as he fat in his chair, and thought his countenance was forme-what milder, and he spake pretty kindly to me when we parted. It was said, he was very bitter against all the English,

English, and had uttered many harsh expressions against them; but his glass was then almost run, for he lived but a little while after this.

Forney, who had paffed his word for me, being agent, had my papers and letters, which I found he did not chuse to part with, except my certifi-cate and letter of credit, and another paper or two, which he did not think worth while to keep. I perceived he was a felfish man, for after he underflood my little money that I should want was not to come through his hands, he came to me, and with an unpleafant tone told me, he would not stand bound for me any longer. I said, I did not intend to give him any offence in employing another to do my business: viz. Charles Sermanfon, a merchant, who was of great fervice to me afterwards, when I came to be acquainted with him. When he heard Forney would not be bound for me any longer, he faid, he would be bound for me, as freely as he would for his own brother. So I was still kept out of prison. Whilst we were here we were examined at the admiralty office, where they asked many questions, and I thought, if I had been enough aware of them, I should have come better off than I did. Before they had us into the room where we were examined, they had something of the form of an oath. I told them I could not take it, being against our principles. After some discourse about it, they, not being willing to let me pass without examining, had me into their room, and asked me my name and place of abode, whether I was married, and what children; to which I answered. They asked what preparations were making in England for war? To which I answered, as I did not concern myself about such things, I should say nothing about them. He asked other questions about the manner of our being taken, and what was taken from me, and about our ship and cargo. Then after a pretty long pause, he said, now I have some close questions to ask you, but you must not be angry. I was filent, not knowing how I should come off. He then asked me, whether I was a minister? I faid, I did not chuse to be put under that denomination. He said, what then? I told him, my business, when at home, was to look after and feed cattle, and fuch in our country were called graziers. He asked me what I was going to do in Pennfylvania? I faid, to visit my friends. Whether I knew any body there? I faid I was acquainted with but a few. Whether I was fent by the Quakers? I told him, I was not; though I had their approbation therein. He then asked me, whether or no the Quakers would fight if they were attacked by an enemy? I faid, it was not my bufinefs then to tell him whether they would or not; it was enough for me to an-fwer for myself. Then said he, If you were fmitten on one cheek, would not you turn the other? Or, if they took away your coat, would not you give them your cloke also? I said, it was so in Scripture, but I had not freedom at that time to answer those questions.

He asked me no more questions at that time, that I remember.

About this time I suffered much in my spirit; the reason is best known to the Lord. I was heavy and forrowful in my mind both night and day for fome time, and much afraid, left I should bring dishonour to Truth by my unfaithfulness, or some slip or other that I had made or might make, for want of care and watchfulness, in that strange land, separated from my brethren, and deprived of all outward help and comfort. But this to me was a profitable feafon, for I found the fear of the Lord, which was then in my heart, did preserve me from evil, and falling into temptation. Though such company as I had was very unpleasant to me, and I thought myself unfit for conversation; yet, when by honest in-quirers, I was asked questions concerning our faith and principles, I was helped, in the openings of Truth, to give them an answer concerning the hope that was in me: scriptures freely opening, and all things brought to my Go rememremembrance, fufficient to put to filence, and ftop the mouths of gainfayers.

Whilst I staid in Morlaix, Charles Sermanfon (before mentioned) who often invited me to his house, one evening, as we were in discourse, asked me, why I went abroad in fuch troublesome times? I told him, I believed it to be my duty; for nothing else would have induced me to leave all that were near to me in this world, as wife and children, but a fense of duty to God, and obedience to what I believed he required of me; for as to outward gain or advantage, I had nothing of that in my view, for fuch as have freely received, must freely give.

Thus fetting forth the nature, call, and qualification of the true ministry, I saw it had some reach upon him and his wife, who sat by, and desired that he would interpret to her what I said. When she understood I had left a wife and children behind me, she said that could could not be confiftent with the will of God. I fignified, she did not confider Christ saith, "He that loveth " father or mother, wife or children, " houses or lands, more than me, is not worthy of me." I took the liberty to reprove her husband, for taking the great and facred name in vain, which I suppose made some alteration in his countenance. She then asked him what I faid. When he told her, she faid, I had done well, for that was his great weakness, and she hoped he would take notice of it. I said, by turning our minds to the light of Christ in our hearts, which reproveth for fin, as we came to yield obedience to it, we should be helped to overcome our weaknesses. She faid I was a faint, and had overcome the temptations of the world. I faid, what I am, it is by grace. I have nothing to boast of, and by grace I am saved out of many temptations of the world; yet was a man of like passions, and liable to many weaknesses, as they were; and was no longer fafe than whilft I kept upon my watch. My mind was opened to point out to them the way of falvation, scripture being brought to confirm the sufficiency, work, and operation of the grace of God, upon the hearts of the children of men; with the faving help there is in it, as it is yielded obedience unto. It was a feasonable opportunity. Finding freedom, I let him see the certificate I had from my friends. When he had read it, he faid, he liked it very well. I told him fomething of the good order we had amongit us, which he feemed to approve well of; but faid, he could but admire that I should take fo much pains, without any view of outward advantage. I told him, what I had faid was the truth. He faid, he did believe it was, But, faid he, our priests would not go across that room without being paid.

Perceiving that what had already paffed had fome good effect, for the man was very loving, and his understanding measurably opened, to distinguish between the true and false ministers, I took my leave for that time, and went to my quarters, which was at a tavern, where I was for several days, and had much company of divers forts. As I appeared to them somewhat singular, they wanted to know what I was, and fuch as could speak English would ask me questions; and as I found freedom I answered them. One came as I was fitting in a room, there being a pretty deal of company, and asked why the Quakers would not fight? I told him, the weapons of the primitive believers were not carnal, but fpiritual, and mighty, through faith, to the pulling down fin, and the strong holds of Satan; and fuch as are now come under the peaceable government of the great King of Kings (who faid, if his kingdom had been of this world, then his fervants would have fought) cannot fight with carnal weapons, though there may feem as great a necessity, as there was when our Lord was like to be delivered to the Jews. I had to open feveral paffages of Scripture, which fet forth the peaceable government of Christ, who came not to deftroy men's lives, but to fave them;

them; and that it was not the lamb's nature to tear and devour, but the wolf's. This opportunity was feafonable, the people were very still and attentive. He that asked me this question had often been with me, and had asked many questions, but was now silent, and seemed to go away satisfied; for the power of God was over them at that time.

After fome time, I, with fome others who were prisoners at large, was ordered into the country about thirty miles, to a town called Carhaix. Charles Sermanson supplied me with what money I wanted, and also recommended me to a friend of his there, one John Grace, a counsellor at law, who, during my ftay, shewed feveral tokens of his regard and hearty friendship, after he and I came to be acquainted; though I may say with safety, I never sought his, nor any other's savour, by any indirect means, or in a way Truth did not admit of. When I went to his house, it was in the evening, and he taking the the letter with his hat off, made a bow, but I not returning it as he expected, he with an earnest look, and fomewhat of an unpleasant tone, faid, I might go to the tavern, and he would come to me in the morning. He did so, and told me, as I had been recommended to his care by his good friend Charles Sermanson, he would do the best he could in providing me a private lodging; and any other fervice he could do me, which lay in his power, should not be wanting. I told him, I was obliged to him, and was glad to find him, and fome others of his countrymen, fo well disposed as to be kind to ftrangers; and as I was a ftranger, and also a prisoner, I should be glad of his affistance. He said, he was glad he had the opportunity of affifting his fellow-creatures, for he looked upon it to be no more than his duty. Then we walked into the town, where he provided me a chamber, and I had every thing found me that was necessary. My new landlord took great notice of my behaviour, and, I suppose, at first did not know how to behave H behave himself towards me, that I might not be offended; for being poor, he was glad of a little money. He could speak no English, and I but little French, so we could have no conversation; but he told one of the Englishmen, who spoke French, that I did him good, though he could not understand me. He was a perukemaker by trade, and when he had left work in the evenings, he and his wife would come and fit with me a confiderable time in filence; which was not difagreeable to me: for fome-times, I believe, we were favoured with good, when we fat in filence. His wife was a religious woman, and of a folid fober behaviour, fo far as I ever faw. I staid in their house three months, and then took lodgings in another place; three young men in like circumftances with myfelf, desiring very much to be with me, and they not having room for us all, I left them. As the young men behaved well, their company was agreeable; two of them being friends fons, though they did not in many things take up the cross as they ought to have done, yet their behaviour to me was such, as gained my love and affection. One of them soon after died in the French prison, being, when taken, upon his passage to Rhode-Island, where his parents lived, at whose house I afterwards was, and found them very forrowful, for they had lost three of their sons, two at sea, and one in prison. As these things affected and made some impressions upon my mind, I made a tew remarks.

John Grace, the counfellor, after a little while, became very loving, and had me often to his house, it not being far from my lodgings, and I found myself very free to converse with him, and told him in freedom at one time, if he had any thing in his mind to ask concerning our society or principles, I would have him be quite free, for I should be willing to answer honestly according to the best of my understanding. He said, he understood we did not baptise with water. I told him, the apostle

Paul faith, "There is one Lord, one " faith, one baptism;" and water, how or by whomfoever administered, is only fufficient to put away the filth of the flesh, but not able to wash away the fin of the foul. The fame apostle faid, "He was not fent to baptife," the there must be understood with water) " but to preach the gospel, " which is the power that baptiseth " into the one Spirit." He further faith concerning himfelf, that he was not awhit behind the chiefest of the apostles; yet he thanks God, he had baptifed no more than the few he recites, which he would not have done, if baptism with water had been the one baptism essential to salvation. He faid, he thought there ought to be fomething done to children by the minister, to initiate them into the church. I faid, as to our not being in the practice of iprinkling children with water, or figning them with the fign of the crofs, as it was not feriptural, we could not be juftly blamed for being in the difuse of it. He then faid, if he at first had put on the prieft's priest's gown, instead of that he then wore, he should have thought it his business to have searched more into the Scriptures. I told him, I took him to be a man of that understanding, as very well to know, it ought to be every one's business to search into the things that belong to their own peace. He faid it was true, but they had men who were learned, whom they paid, and he looked upon these to be his teachers, and as for him, he was but a hearer, and if they deceived him, it would be the worse for themselves; they could not deceive God. I faid, it was true, they could not; but as the falvation of the foul is a thing of fo great moment, we should not have our dependence upon others, and as to teachers, we might know them by their fruits; for, according to Christ's own words, "men do not gather " grapes of thorns, nor figs of thittles." He further faith to his ministers, " freely you have received, freely " give." As to those of polluted lips, I thought they could not prefit the people at all. He faid, there was no ScripScripture that forbad marrying, and he thought their priefts wrong in that; for they did not keep themselves chaste, but deluded and deceived many poor young women. I faid, it was great pity any should be deprived of the benefit of the Scriptures, for all ought to have liberty to try all things, that they may hold fast that which is good; for it is dangerous pinning their faith upon other men's fleeves:
"if the blind lead the blind, they " will both fall into the ditch." He then faid, he should be glad to read fome of our authors, which I gave him some expectations of sending, if I lived to return home.

Some time after this, he fent for me to dine with him, when I expected he would have had fome priefts with him, but he had not; though he told me he had invited one of their clergymen to dine with him, and acquainted him I was to be there, but he defired to be excused, alledging, he thought I should be offended with his company. I said I should not, if he was a religious gious fober man. I was not had before the commissary or chief magistrate, at my first coming here, with the rest of the prisoners, but this counsellor gave in my name, and when they went to receive the government's allowance, I went, not having enough to support me without. But hearing the commissary had uttered some very bitter expressions against the Quakers, and me in particular, for not putting off my hat, as he had observed, when I met him in the street, I had an inclination to pay him a visit, which I acquainted a young man with, who could interpret for me. We found the commissary in the street. The young man told him, I was come to see him, or pay him a visit. He looking earneftly at me, after a paufe, took us into a room, and before I could fay any thing to him, asked me, why I did not put off my hat? I told him, uncovering our heads was what we did when we prayed and addressed the Almighty; but to do it to our fellowcreatures was against our consciences.

The answer, though short, I perceived fatisfied him, for his haughty countenance fell, and he then spake mildly, and said, he had heard we did not baptise our children. I said, we did not use water-baptism. What do you then, faid he, instead of water? I faid, the one baptism, which we believe to be saving and essential to salvation, is spiritual, that of fire and the Holy Ghost; and as to little childrén, they are heirs of the kingdom of heaven without water, or the help of any mortal man. I told him, I had heard he faid fomething against me, but I came in good will to pay him a friendly visit, for I had a mind to speak with him myself. He then took me by the hand, faying, he would not do me any hurt, but all the fervice that lay in his power. I took my leave of him with thankfulness, that truth had thus far prevailed, and the young man was well fatisfied; for he was fomewhat in fear before we went, having heard what the commissary had faid concerning me. Ever after, when I met with him, he looked pleafantly, and I believe never any more took offence at my hat.

Charles Sermanson, whilst I was here, wrote me feveral kind letters; and mine, which I wrote to England, he took care to fend to his correspondent in London; by whom also my letters from home were fafely conveyed to me, which made my confinement much the easier, as I could often hear from my wife and family, and they from me. After I had been confined about five months, I was released; my paffport coming to hand, I shewed it to John Grace, and he went with me to the commissary, who readily signed it, expressing his gladness that I had got my liberty, and was going to my family. He also gave leave to several of my fellow-prisoners, who were defirous to accompany me to Morlaix. The 23d of the 4th month I took my leave of the counsellor and his family, with divers others, both French and English, who came to see me in a very affectionate manner. When I came to Morlaix, I found a Dutch veffel bound bound to Oftend. Charles Sermanson agreed with the master to set me upon the English coast, if the wind would permit, which happened well the 28th of the 4th month 1757.

When I came to London, I found feveral friends very glad to fee me, having had a near fympathy with me in my exercifes; and I faw the Lord had been my helper and deliverer, in that he had been pleafed to bring me fafe to my native land; and not only fo, but I found friends as nearly united to me as ever; which was a great comfort. For I had been afraid, left they should stand at a distance from me; but magnified be the Great Name for evermore, I found all well in that respect, and likewise when I came to my own habitation, which was on the 11th of the 5th month 1757.

I foon fet out again for the yearly meeting in London, which began the 28th of the 5th month this year. My brother Maw, and two other friends, accompanied me. It was believed I was intending to proceed again to America; but I could say little to it when asked, till the yearly meeting was over, and friends mostly gone out of town. I was then made sensible, it was my duty again to make preparation to fet forward; a ship being near ready to fail for Philadelphia. I then acquainted friends with it, who left me to my liberty, expressed their unity with it, and made all things as easy for me as they could. For which my spirit was bowed in thankfulness, to the great, good, and wise Disposer of all things, who can dispose the minds of his people as he feeth meet; and who nis people as he feeth meet; and who ever will, I believe, make way for all that put their trust in him, that his requirings may be in all things duly answered. I took my leave of my wife and family in a solemn manner, not knowing I should see them again in mutability. I also settled my outward affairs in such order as I thought might be for the best.

The 19th of the 6th month 1757, I left London, several friends accom-1 2 panying panying me to Gravesend. The vessel being just ready to sail, I took leave of friends, and followed her in a small vessel as far as the Nore, two of my kind friends still accompanying me, viz. John Sherwin and Thomas Wagstaffe. I went on board the ship, and they returned to London. We arrived in the Downs the 21st, and waited for a convoy, it being a time when much shipping were taken by the French. The people were not willing to go without men of war.

I went on shore while here, and found a sn all family of very sensible friends, of which I was glad. The 23d we weighed anchor, being in all about fixty sail. We lost sight of land the 8th of the 7th month, had a good passage, and in ten weeks from London we got safe to Philadelphia. Here I found several friends from Europe in the service of Truth. We were truly glad to see each other, and had comfortable meetings together: blessed be the name of the Lord! I have great cause to be truly thankful.

and in humble reverence, to praise his great and everlasting name, for many deliverances both by sea and land. It may in truth say, his name hath been to me a strong tower, and thither It have run and found safety. For though he suffers his to be tried, as in the surnace of assisting of their same hath been made bare for their deliverance, and he hath granted them the petition of their souls. Glory and honour be given to him, and that for evermore! I staid in and about Philadelphia till the yearly meeting was over.

The 5th of the 9th month 1757, I went into East Jersey, John Pemberton accompanying me. We had a meeting at Haddonfield; thence to Chester, and had a meeting there also, both to good satisfaction. We lodged at Edmund Holinhead's, and on first day were at Evesham meeting, which was attended with the seasoning virtue and power of Truth We went that night to Burlington, and attended the monthly meeting on second day, which

I thought was to general fatisfaction. I lodged at John Smith's, a fubstantial friend, and a very serviceable man in the society. Here John Pemberton left me.

I went next day to Ancocas, it being the fourth of the tenth month, and third of the week. We had a meeting there, which was hard in the beginning, and dull; but that spirit of earthly mindedness, which had too much prevailed, was testified against, and truth, I think, did in a good degree spring up over all: praised be the great name for ever! The fourth of the week, accompanied by another friend, had two meetings at Mount Holly, both to pretty good satisfaction: we lodged at Josiah Foster's. Fifth day we had a meeting at a school-house, which was large, and though it held long, the people were very quiet: we lodged at William Smith's. Sixth day we had a meeting at Old Spring-field; first day at Manssield. It was a large meeting, but the minds of the people hankering much after words, the fpring of life, that had run through me, being in a great measure stopt, a cloud came and covered my tabernacle. I saw it was safest to stand still. We lodged at Peter Harvey's, a kind and steady friend.

Next day, the fecond of the week, and tenth of the month, we had a meeting at a school-house in the neigh-bourhood, which was small, but in fome degree fatisfactory: we lodged at William Smith's: had a meeting at Upper Springfield on third day; at Freehold on fourth; Croswick's on fifth; Borden town on fixth; and Trenton on first day: we lodged here at William Morris's. From thence to Stoney Brook, and had a meeting on the second day of the week, and 17th of the month. We lodged at James Clark's. In this place they had been hurt, and scattered in their minds; as also in several other places, where there had been a striving, and a dividing spirit got in. From thence we went to Robins's meeting on third day, which was not so satisfactory as could have have been defired; fome being reflefs, the meeting holding long.

We went from thence to Squan, and had a meeting there on fifth day amongst a company of poor dark people. Then to Shrewsbury the twenty-fecond of the tenth month, where was a meeting for ministers and elders. The meeting on first day was very large, and, confidering the great numbers of people of all ranks, was quiet. Second day it was a good folid meeting, Truth prevailing over all; praises be given to the Great Name for ever. The Son of Righteousness did arise with healing in his wings, and my foul was delivered, as out of the pit; for I had been ready to despair, and thought I should have been overcome by the enemy. Great horror and darkness was over my understanding for a time; but the Lord did fend his light, and his truth, and caused it to shine upon my tabernacle; and I had to declare of his mercy and goodness towards the children of men, and to invite them to come and fee for themthemselves, what great things the Lord will do for them that trust in him. This great meeting ended well, and I was truly thankful to the great Master of our assemblies. We lodged at Joseph Wardal's, a worthy friend.

On third day we came back to Crofwick, and lodged at Thomas Middleton's. Next day to widow Andrews's, where my companion was taken ill. Here I left him, after staying one night, and went to Haddenfield with Isaac Andrews, and lodged at his house one night, and so to Philadelphia, where I staid till their quarterly meeting. We had several comfortable opportunities together. John Hunt and Christopher Wilson were here, and had good fervice. I staid about Philadelphia, attending meetings as they came in course, both for worship and discipline, until the fifteenth of the eleventh month, when I fet out towards the fouthern provinces, Thomas Lightfoot accompanying me. We went to Chester, and were at their youth's quarterly meeting, which was a time a time to be remembered by many of us.

We visited the meetings through Chefter county, till we came to Not-tingham, and were at the monthly meeting, John Hunt from England also being there. It was a suffering time to me, I being sensible many were worshipping only in the outward court, whose dwelling was in the form without the power, fuch cause suffering to the true feed. I staid meeting with them on first day, and was led to fpeak closely to several states, and left them pretty eafy in mind. I lodged at John Churchman's, and had a meeting at West-Nottingham on third day; at Little Britain on fourth day, where feveral of the Presbyterians came in, with their priest, who took down in writing what I said; though I per-ceived not that he was writing, till I had nigh done speaking. When I sat down, most of them went out, but he staid; and, after a short space, I had to say, "The time shall come, " when the dead shall hear the voice " of the Son of God; or they that are dead in forms; and they that hear and obey shall live; and that Christ is the resurrection, and the life, and he that liveth and believeth in him, though he is dead, yet shall he live." I did not enlarge much upon it; but the meeting broke up in a good degree of life, and the priest went off with his company. Friends thought there was no danger of any ill coming of it, but I was afraid, lest Truth should suffer.

I rode that evening after meeting to William Downing's, who had a large family, with whom we had a good opportunity. Thence we came to Sudfbury, where I had a meeting, and in the openings of truth, had closely to speak to the states of many. From thence I went to Lampiter, where I had two meetings; and so to Lancaster, and had a meeting with the few friends that lived there. We lodged at Isaac Whitelock's; and after having a meeting at James Wright's, we crossed the river Susquehannah, and went to York, where a few friends dwelt, and had a meeting among them. We quartered at Nathan Hussey's.

Our next meeting was at Newbury; it was filent, but to my fatisfaction. We passed through Warrington, but had no meeting, it being the youth's quarterly meeting at Huntington, where we had an edifying time together. We had also meetings at Munallin, John Evans's, Pike Creek, Bush Creek, and Mincorkesa. Then croffing Patomack, we came into Virginia, to Fairfax; where we had a meeting on the fecond day of the week, and twelfth of the twelfth month. It was a good meeting, Truth having the dominion: magnified be the great name of Israel's God, and that for evermore! We lodged at Mary Jeney's, a discreet orderly woman, who had several sober well-inclined children. From hence we went to Goofe Creek, and had a meeting on third day: it was well. On fourth day we had a meeting at David Pole's, feveral friends accompanying us. I had a traa travail in spirit, that Truth might not lose ground; finding a spirit of ease had greatly prevailed in many of the professor of Truth, to the sorrow of the honest-hearted. We left David Pole's house on fifth day, and rode over the Blue Ridge, or Blue Mountains, where the Indians had done much mischief, by burning houses, killing, destroying, and carrying many away captives; but friends had not hitherto been hurt: yet several had left their plantations, and sled back again over the Blue Mountains, where the lands had been rightly purchased of the Indians.

Things feemed dreadful, and feveral hearts ready to fail. We proceeded on our journey, and came within fix miles of Winchester, where the English had a fort. On fixth day we had a meeting at Hopewell, which was an open time. I found my mind much engaged for the poor suffering people, but had to tell them, their greatest enemies were those of their own houses. The meeting ended well. We lodged at Joseph Lupton's, an ancient friend, who

who with his wife was very loving to us. The Indians had killed and carried away feveral within a few miles of their habitation; yet they did not feem much afraid; for they faid, they did not fo much as pull in their fneckfiring when they went to bed, and had neither lock nor bar. We had a meeting at Crookedrun on first day, the eighteenth of the twelfth month. It was a good meeting, the Lord favouring with his living presence. Glory be to his great Name for ever!

On fecond day we fet forward through the woods, and over the hills and rocks, croffing feveral large creeks. We came in the evening to a man's house, called Moses Mackoy, and had a meeting there next day. They were an unsettled people, yet assented to truth; but were not fully convinced in their minds, concerning the sufficiency of it, having an eye to outward shadows: I left them in good will. On fourth day we rode about thirty miles to Smith's Creek, where we had a meeting on fifth day, at the house of William Carall. It was filent, though they had fent notice feveral miles, and many came. I told them, though I had nothing to com-municate by way of preaching, or declaration, yet I found freedom to have another opportunity at a proper time and place: which I had next day at the house of John Mills, about ten miles off, fomewhat on our way. The meeting was to good fatisfaction. The Indians had killed and taken away people within two or three miles of this place, not many weeks before; but the Lord preserved us in our jour-ney. Thanksgiving and praise be to him, and that for ever!

Seventh day we fet out towards the fouth parts, and lodged that night at the foot of the Blue Mountains, at a friendly man's house, having two friends to conduct us. Next day, being the first of the week, we crossed the mountains, and towards evening came to Douglass's, and had a meeting with the family. The twenty-seventh, and third of the week, we had a meeting at Camp Creek. It was a pretty open meeting, though the fense of good is almost lost amongst them in that place, and their states much to be lamented. We lodged at Charles Moman's. Next day we rode fifteen miles, and lodged at Francis Clark's, and had a meeting at Fork Creek. Many people came, and sat with great attention, and the meeting was solid.

From thence we went to Jeneto, where we had a meeting, and many people came, but it being filent, they feemed diffatisfied. As I had nothing to fay, I was glad I could be made willing to be what the Lord faw meet to allot me. We lodged at Jane Watkins's, a widow woman. She received us kindly, and had feveral loving and well-inclined children. We had a meeting at Cedar Creek on feventh day, the thirty-first of the twelfth month 1757. It was a fatisfactory and good meeting. Truth had the dominion, praises be to the great Giver of every good and perfect gift!—I lodged at William Stanley's.

From

From thence we went to Carolina, where the meeting was on first day, the first of the first month 1758. It was a large and good meeting. The states of the people were so spoken to, that through the Lord's goodness and condescension, I hope may tend to his honour, and to the help of his poor creatures. We lodged at Morner Chiles's, and also at John Chiles's, one night. Next meeting we were at the Swamp. It feemed to me, as I travelled along through these parts, true religion was much wanting among many of the professors of it. I lodged at William Johnson's. The next meeting was at the Black Creek. It was a good time to me, and hope also to some others: praises be to the great Name! I lodged at an old man's house that night. On the seventh of the week, and feventh of the month, the meeting was at White Oak Swamp, being monthly meeting, and then rode to Curls, and lodged at John Plea-fant's, a very kind friend. We were at their meeting on first day. The third of the week, and tenth of the month.

month, had a meeting at Wine Oak, fourteen miles from Curls, which was fatisfactory. We lodged at John Cruss's, and on fourth day came back to John Pleasant's. On fifth day we rode to Robert Langley's nigh Petersburgh, and on fixth day had a meeting at the house of a friend called Butter. It was an acceptable time to some.

After meeting we went to Robert Langley's, where we were kindly entertained. On first day we were at Pattison's meeting, which was a low time with me; yet truth in some good degree did prevail. On second day we came to Burley, and lodged at John Honeycut's, and had a meeting at Burley on third day, which was to fome acceptable. We lodged at Wike Honeyout's, and were at the monthly meeting at Surry-black Water, where we had good fervice for truth. They being in the mixture, fuffered people of other focieties to fit with them in their meetings of business. grieved, and could not be easy till I had defired them to withdraw, that did not make profession with us, both from the men's, and women's meeting. I had to recommend to the oneness and fimplicity Truth led into, and to keep their meetings for discipline, in that wisdom, power, and authority that they were at first set up in; that they might not join with the world's spirit, but keep themselves separate, and in the wisdom and power of God, keep the authority, and bear rule over those that were got into the mixture, and were for having those that did not profess with us to sit with them, when they transacted the affairs of the church. For some that professed Truth had encouraged this practice, which tended to weaken the hands of the honesthearted, they not having found that liberty and freedom to speak so closely to their brethren, as need required. Joseph could not use that freedom, and unbosom himself to his brethren, in fuch a manner as the case required, till the Egyptians were gone out. I was glad I was there, for Truth had the dominion in the end. We lodged

at Cinstam Baly's. I visited all the little handfuls scattered up and down in these parts, and often had service in families. I met with Samuel Spavold, who likewife was much engaged in the fervice of Truth. His labour of love in the work of the gospel was indeed great in this part of the world; those of other focieties being much reached by his ministry. We were truly glad to see each other; for as iron sharpeneth iron, fo doth the face of a man his friend. We had feveral comfortable and confirming feafons together, especially at the quarterly meeting held at Black Creek for that part of Virginia; many friends from divers places being there. I was glad to fee them, but what made us more glad, and brought us nearer to one another, was, because the Lord favoured us with his presence, and filled our hearts with his pure love.

I having nigh visited all the meetings in this province, was taking my leave of many of them in time, so far as I could see them. Taking a few meetings meetings in my way, in company with Samuel Spavold, I proceeded towards North Carolina, but left him to visit some meetings he had not been at. I went to Pinewoods, nigh Perquimon's River, in North Carolina; and had a meeting at Pinewoods the ninth of the fecond month. It was large, and attended with the overshadowings of divine goodness. To me it was an edifying itrengthening time, as I trust it was to many more. We took up our quarters at Thomas Newby's: the next day we had a meeting at Wells, which was the fixth of the week. On feventh day we were at the Old Neck; and on first day at Little River. This meeting was very large, there being a confiderable body of friends in this part; and people of other focieties attend friends meetings when there are ftrangers. I was helped through those large affemblics far beyond my own expectation. I thought myself fo unfit, weak, and unworthy, that I was almost cast down in my mind before I came there; but praifes and thank!givings to him that helped me, I left them rejoicing in a fense of the Lord's goodness and mercy to my soul. I lodged two nights at Thomas Nicholfon's, who mostly favoured me with his company whilst I was amongst them. Here my companion Thomas Lightfoot left me, and returned to Philadelphia. The last meeting I was at here, was appointed for Samuel Spavold. At Pinewoods we had a solid opportunity together, many minds being truly bowed to the root of life in themselves, and finding myself clear, may truly say, I parted with a remnant in pure love, and the unity of the one spirit.

I then fet forward towards a wilderness country, where the inhabitants were very thin, two young men accompanying me. Our first meeting after we lett Perquimons, was at John Coupeland's. There were but few friends, but people of other societies came in, who had notice; amongst whom was an officer in the army. He came to our quarters in the morning, and rode about fix miles on the road towards.

towards the meeting, then turned off, and faid he would go and fetch his wife. He also brought with him a company of young people, who were learning to dance at his house, which I did not know till the meeting was over, and then he came and told me, he had invited them to come to the meeting, and also their master, but he would not come. I faid, it was well, but it was pity he should so encourage fuch vanity, as to keep a dancing-fehool at his house. He excused it, faying, the man owed him money, and he knew not how otherways to get it, but by letting him teach his family. I fignified, he had better lose it, than have his family taught that which would be unprofitable to them; for there was a woe pronounced against fuch as did chant to the found of the viol, and invented to themselves instruments of musick, like David. He faid, it was the truth that they had heard fpoken to-day, but acknowledged they did not walk answerable to it. I said, it was their own fault; for if they would take heed to the teachings of truth in themselves, it would lead them into all truth, and consequently out of all error, and every bye-path and way that leads to destruction.

After we had refreshed ourselves, we passed his house, and he seeing us, came and invited us in, saying, he had entertainment for us, and should be glad of our company, and we should have a room to ourselves. I acknowledged his kindness, but as time would not permit, we must proceed on our journey. We took our leave of him, and I thought he was so reached, as to be measureably convinced of the sufficiency of the blessed Truth; though his appearance, and likewise his mind being lofty, he was not willing to submit to the low appearance of it.

Our next meeting was at Thomas Knox's, a man lately convinced: it was in a good degree fatisfactory. We had very difficult roads, through great fwamps, and acrofs many creeks, all through the woods; and in many places but little path to be feen. We came to Fort-River, where there is a meeting fettled, of fuch as had been lately convinced. Many came to meeting, which was held at Henry Horn's. Some of them were unfettled in their minds, not being founded upon the fure rock; but fuch as feek shall find, and they that dig deep enough will come to the fure foundation, that the righteous have built upon in all ages of the world. Henry Horn had been a teacher among the Baptists. He feemed to be a steady well-disposed man, and had a few words in meetings. After I left his house, I had a meeting at Joseph Pitman's, who, with feveral others, was under convincement. It was an edifying feafon, many being fensibly touched with the love of truth. I staid with them one night, and then went to a small meeting nigh a place called Nuce. It was two days journey, a very difficult road to find, and none of our companions had been there before.

After this meeting, we went to Conis Sound, an inlet of the fea. We Mi had ninety miles to ride, and were altogether unacquainted with the way, having rivers, and many swamps to cross. The two young men were still my companions, Joshua Fletcher, and Francis Nixon, who were very ferviceable to me through this almost uninhabited part of the world. We got to Henry Stainton's in the night, who took us in, and entertained us very kindly. When we had flaid two days, had a meeting, and rested our-selves, we set forward towards the next meeting among friends, which was one hundred and fifty miles. But in our way we had two meetings among people of other focieties. I had still no guide but the young men, who knew no more of the way than myself. But such as are used to the woods can find the way through them much better than fuch as are not.

The first meeting we had after we left Conis-Sound, was at Permeanus Hauton's, who gave us an invitation to his house, and sent to give notice to his neighbours, though some lived several feveral miles distant. We got to his house about the time the meeting was appointed, where we found feats placed, and every thing in fuch convenient order for a meeting, as I thought I had feldom feen. His rooms being little, he had placed feats in his courtyard, and under the windows, that I believe all could fit and hear without the least troubling one another; and indeed I thought his labour and good inclination were bleffed, for a folid time it was, and I found openness to declare the truth amongst them. I would that all our friends, upon the like occasion, would take this man for their example, in being diligent to invite their neighbours, and to make room and accommodate them in the best manner they are capable of. It certainly hath a good favour, and is often attended with a bleffing.

A fleady friend, that came from among the Presbyterians, told me, that the care and pains that some friends took to invite him, and some others, was one moving cause towards his convincement. He faid, he once told a young man, who had frequently invited him to meetings when firangers came, that as he, nor any of his friends came to their meetings, he thought he would go no more. The young man antiwered very calmly, faying, We must not come to you, but we want you to come to us. This, faid he, affected my mind, with the diligence friends had used without view of outward gain, that I concluded, it must be the love of God in their hearts, that induced them to call and invite us to come to them. This I mention more particularly, because I have seen some that profess truth (to my grief) very deficient in this respect. We had another comfortable opportunity in the evening with this man and his family, and fome others, that staid all night.

Next morning I, with the two young men, and one more, who had a mind to go a day or two along with us through the wilderness, set forward, well refreshed both in body and mind; hard things being made easy, and rough and untrodden paths being made smooth to my mind. We had a meeting also at George Cowper's, whose wife was educated among friends. We staid one night at Wilmintown, the capital town in North Carolina; but it being their general court time, and the privateers having brought in prizes, the people's minds were in great commotions, so that I could find no room nor freedom to have a meeting, though several called Quakers lived there, but held no meeting, except when strangers came.

We croffed a branch of Cape Fear River, and landed upon a great swamp, which was very rotten, and dangerous, by reason of the overslowing of the river; but the two young men, and a negro, whom we hired to help us; carrying boards from one place to another for the horses to tread upon; in time, and with much difficulty, we got well over. We then came again into the woods, where little path was to be seen; it likewise being rainy dark weather, we could not tell which way to go, but rode many miles, hoping we might be fleering right; and just at the close of the evening, before it was quite dark, we came to a little house, the fight of which was sa-tisfactory, being weary, and very wer. When we called, the man said he kept an ordinary, which we found to be true. However, we were contented with fuch as we found, and thankful we fared fo well. We were in our direct road for the place we intended, which was Carver's Creek, where we got next day, the fixth of the week, and tenth of the third month. Here was a small gathering of friends. We staid their first day meeting over, and then went to Don's Creek, where we found another gathering of fuch as call themselves friends, but had been much hurt, and feattered in their minds from the true shepherd, by an enemy that had fown tares.

Here I parted with my two good companions, who had travelled with me more than five hundred miles. Being nearly united together, we parted in true love. This I mention, because the Lord loves a chearful giver, and those did, I thought, what they did, with great freedom and chearfulness, not begrudging a little time, nor a little outward substance, for the sake of the good cause of truth. Those will not lose their reward, for it is helping forward the work, as that of opening a door, and kindling a fire, is doing part of the business of the master's house; and he doth look upon it as done to himself, if it is but that of handing a cup of cold water, as it is done in a right spirit, it will have his bleffed approbation and reward. I had another companion, providentially, I thought, provided here for me.

William Feril, a public friend, having heard of my being in the country, had got himfelf ready against I came, and had freedom in the truth to travel with me, till I should fall in with another suitable companion; which made my travels through those lonely places much the easier. When we let his house, we set our faces towards South Caro-

Carolina, having but one meeting of friends to take in the way, which was settled upon a river called P. D. about an hundred miles from the faid friend's house. This we accomplished in about two days. In the night we lodged in the woods. The few friends were truly glad to fee us, they being feldom visited. We had comfortable and refreshing seasons together, the Lord owning and favouring with his good presence, strengthened not only the inward, but the outward man also. Here I was fenfibly affected with fuch a feal and evidence of peace in my own mind, that I was fully perfuaded, I was in the way of my duty: it made me go on again very chearfully. No one can tell how good the Lord is, but such as have tasted, and seen his marvellous ways of working, and how he can spread a table for those, that in faithful obedience give up to his requiring, in a very wilderness; for he neither lets them want for inward, nor outward food. There is now, as well as formerly, a little remnant, that, with my foul, can fet their feals to the truth truth of this; and can fay unto him, We have lacked nothing, Lord!

Francis Clark, with whom we had quartered, bore us company one day and night in the woods. We thought fometimes, we travelled near fixty miles in a day; for when we had to lodge in the woods, we rose early, and lay down late. Our friend Clark returned home, leaving us to shift for ourselves; but my companion, having fome knowledge of the way, steered, I believe, a pretty straight course. When night came, we pitched our tent in a valley, where there was some grass, and a little brook of water. So when we had eaten fuch as our bags afforded, and given our horses provender, and taken care of them, with what little we had, we lay ourselves down, and slept very found and comfortably, being wearied with riding.

Next morning we were flirring by the time it was well light, and ioon being ready, mounted our horses; and it was well we did so, for there came N fuch a rain that day, that it raised the creeks and rivers to high, that if we had not got over them that night, we might have been stopped for some days. We travelled till late in the night, and coming to a house, defired we might have ledgings, but the median at it. have lodgings; but the master of it told us, we could not. We asked him, how far it was to another house. He faid, it was but a mile, but there was a deep creek in the way, and he would not go along with us, if we would give him a great deal of money. I then very carneftly defired, that he would let us stay in his house all night, and we would pay him for his trouble, and for what we had; for we had rode almost all the day in the rain, and it was a very cold rainy night. He told us, he would not let us itay there, and fo left us standing without his gate. But a young man franding by, feeing and hearing what had paffed, took pity on us, and faid, though it was dangerous croffing the waters, he would take his horse, and go along with us; which he did, and we got well through, to the place the man had told us of. After refreshing ourfelves with such as the house afforded, we took up our lodgings in a very cold room, such as I had never lain in before. But, bad as it was, I was glad and thankful we had not to lie out all night in the rain. I rested well, and in the morning was well both in body and mind.

The fourth of the week we got to the Wateree, where feveral friends from Ireland had been settled about fix or feven years. We had a meeting with them, and then, with Samuel Milhouse and my companion, I set out towards Charles Town. This took us most of three days, it being one hundred and thirty miles. When we came there, we found but few fleady friends, yet we had some good opportunities together; feveral of the towns, people also coming in. I trust our visit was of service, and tended to edification, and strengthening the two or three that dwell in that remote part of the world. However, I thought I should not be easy without paying N 2 them them a visit, though I had to ride for far on purpose.

When I felt myself clear, I returned with my friends to the Wateree, aud was with them at their first day meeting, and meeting for business. We had good opportunities likewise in their feveral families, which I thought would not easily be forgotten. Then taking our leave of them in gospellove, in which we had paid them that visit, we returned to P. D. Samuel Milhouse still accompanying us. The friends there, though their circumstances in the world were but low, treated us very kindly. Their love to truth, and diligence in attending meetings, are worthy of notice; for they had nigh one hundred miles to go to the monthly meeting they belonged to, and I was informed very feldom miffed attending it.

Here my companion and I parted,, he returning home, and I, with Francis Clark, went towards Crane-Creek. His company was fo agreeable, that time time did not feem long. When night came, we took up our lodgings in the woods, and got next day to a place called Deep River, there being feveral families newly fettled there, but they had not yet built a meeting-house. We had a meeting at a friend's house, and then proceeded to Crane-Creek, where there is a large body of friends gathered thither in a few years from the feveral provinces. They told me they had not been fettled there above ten years, but had found occasion to build five meeting-houses, and then wanted one or two more. I had good and seasonable opportunities among them, being freely opened in the love of the gospel, to declare the truth.

When I found myfelf eafy to leave them, having had divers meetings, at Eno, and feveral other places, which, for brevity fake, I forbear to mention; I with Jeremiah Pickitt then fet out towards Virginia, having nigh two hundred miles to travel, and had but one meeting in the way. We got to Robert Langley's on first day evening, where where I staid to rest and restresh myself, after so long and tedious a journey. I then passed to Curls, and travelled through Virginia, having visited most of the meetings before, and came into Maryland. I was at their yearly meeting held at West River. It was very large, and in the several strings thereof overshadowed with the wing of divine power, which tended to nourish the good part, and to the gathering and settling the minds of many upon the sure foundation, and kept down that spirit which would divide in Jacob, and scatter in Israel.

We parted on fourth day in great love, fome of us being nearly united in fpirit. For though many, by balking their testimony against that antichristian yoke of tithes, and trading in negroes, have caused the way of truth to be evil spoken of; yet I was sensible that the regard of heaven was towards them, and the merciful hand was still stretched out, even towards the unfaithful, and backsliders, that they might be gathered. I had a travel and and exercise upon my spirit for the cause of truth, and that the great blessed and everlasting name, which I with many more make a profession of, might not be dishonoured: the faithful are indeed as stakes in Sion, but they are but as one of a family, or two of a tribe.

I then took the meetings in my way to Pennsylvania, as Elk-Ridge, Pa-tapseco, and Patapseco-Forest, Little Falls, Gunpowder, and fo to Deer Creek, where our worthy friends John Churchman and his wife met me. We croffed the river Sufquehanah into Pennsylvania, and so to their house. Having had many precious meetings in this journey, and well cleared my-felf of those provinces, I was easy in my spirit, and much comforted in the Lord, that he had been pleased thus far to help me through. I tarried one night at John Churchman's; and next day, being the feventh of the week, was at New Garden monthly meeting; on first day at London Grove, where there is a large gathering of friends. It was a good opportunity, truth favouring us, we were comforted together in the Lord. On the fecond day, the twenty-ninth of the fifth month, I got to Philadelphia, having in this journey travelled upwards of two thousand eight hundred miles.

After my return from the fouthern provinces, I staid some weeks visiting meetings, and some friends families, in and about Philadelphia; and was also in the Jerseys visiting several meetings, and attended their yearly meeting at Salem, which held three days for worship and discipline. It was an edifying time, things being conducted in a degree of the pure wifdom, and the overthadowing of divine power was witneffed by many. Then, having duly waited for the moving and put-ting forth of the good Shepherd, who faid, "I put forth my sheep, and go "before them," I thought I felt a draft, and not only fo, but likewife true liberty, to vifit New England, which I had not done before. If I had, I should have proceeded, in order to shorten my journey, for it was against mine own inclination to stay so long in and about one place. Therefore I set out the twenty-sixth of the seventh month, Isaac Greenleaf accompanying me.

My first step was to Wright's Town, where was held a general meeting for the county of Bucks. Then we crossed Delaware into East Jersey, and took meetings in our way to New York, then to Flushing upon Long Island, and were at their monthly meeting. Then croffing the Bay went to their quarterly meeting at Purchass. After this, we took feveral meetings, as they fell in our way towards Rhode Island. I then had Robert Willis for my companion, a friend from the Jerseys, who had drawings in his mind that way. Many people came to our meetings in those parts, which are not closely joined in outward fellowship with us; yet are under the operation of the good hand, and in degree convinced of our principles. This, I thought, made our meetings more lively, and the fpring of the gospel to flow more plentifully, to the watering the thirsty ground.

When we had visited the meetings hereabouts, and taken our leave of friends, we travelled through Connecticut government, having but one or two meetings in the way. Prefbyterians, who formerly in those parts were very rigid and bitter against friends, are now become more loving, and treated us very kindly. I had great drawings of the Father's love towards them, believing the secret hand was at work to bring them from the barren mountains of their lifeless profession, to serve the living God in newness of life. We came to Leicester, where there is a little handful that go under our name. We had a meeting with them on first day, the twentieth of the eighth month. We were refreshed together, being strengthened in the God of our salvation. Then we had a meeting at Boulton, about thirty miles from thence, where we met with Samuel Spavold, in his return towards Pennsylvania, he having visited most of the the meetings in New England. We had a good feafon together. Then faluting one another in that unity and fellow-flip which brethren and fellow-labourers ought to dwell in, we parted; and my companion and I went to Uxbridge, and had a meeting. Then to Mendam, where we tarried all night at Mofes Aldrige's, and had a meeting next day; fo on to Winfockit, where we had a meeting. The weather being very hor, many people were nigh fainting; but praifes be to the great Name, the meeting concluded well.

On first day we were at Providence yearly meeting, which is only for worship. It was very large, and tended to the gathering and staying people's minds on Christ, the chief corner stone, and rock of ages; for Truth had the dominion, and the Lord's power was felt. We had our outward entertainment at Stephen Hopkins's, then Governor of Rhode Island. He and his wife treated us with hearty kindness. We had meetings at Cranston, Warwick, and East Greenwich, then upon

Canonicut Island. We then crossed the river, and came to Newport; and attended both their meetings on first day, which were large; a great number residing thereabouts, who go under our name. But, with forrow of heart may it be said, in the time of ease and plenty, many have taken their slight.

We left Newport on third day, and had a meeting at Portsmouth, in which we had good service for Truth. Then croffing the Bay, had a meeting at Fuerton upon the main, in which we were favoured with the openings of Truth, and left them in peace. I took notice of a negro man, who was with us at feveral meetings, and by his own industry, with the help of fome friends, had purchased his freedom, that he might attend meetings; having, for fome time, been convinced of the bleffed Truth, which he much prized, and told me, as he had been obedient to the operation of it, which worketh by love, he found himself engaged in his mind to exhort his fellow-creatures to come to the good principle in themselves; that they, by yielding obedience, might know a being saved by it; or to that effect. This I could not gainsay, nor discourage; but desired him to be faithful to the manifestation of Truth in his own heart, and the measure of Grace he had received. We parted in love and good will, being brethren of one Father.

Our next meeting was at Little Canton, after which I parted with feveral friends, in the unity of the one Spirit, which had brought us into nearness and fellowship with each other; they returning to their places of abode, and I with my companion, and a young man who accompanied us feveral weeks, still kept forward. I was enabled to labour through these parts beyond all outward expectation; for though the meetings were large, by reason of great comings in of other people, I found that gracious promise fulfilled; "As the "day is, fo shall thy strength be." We were at Acockit, New Town, and Dartmouth or Pengansit, and had a meeting meeting at each place. The last meeting, I thought, did not consist of less than eight hundred people. We had at Acushnet, Rochester, Taunton, and Freetown, many living and good opportunities to declare Truth in the free extendings of Gospel-love; also at Swansey, on a first day, had a fatisfactory opportunity. Whilst we were visiting those places, we took up our quarters at Paul Osbourn's, who often accompanied us from one meeting to another, his heart being free and open towards his friends, and to serve Truth.

Having well cleared ourselves, we went towards the yearly meetings at Boston, Lynn, and Salem, the twenty-second of the ninth month. They began at Boston. I do not remember I had seen so much stillness and gravity in so great an assembly, as I observed there. It consisted of people of different persuasions. We have great cause to bow, in humble thankfulness, to the God of all our mercies, that he hath been pleased to make way for his people, people, to enjoy their religious meet-ings without the least molestation, in this and many other places, where our worthy friends formerly suffered fore persecution, by long imprisonment, grievous whippings, spoiling of goods, and some of them laid down their lives for the testimony of a good conscience: and though our God be a gracious, merciful, and long-fuffering God, yet he will take vengeance on all the workers of iniquity, and the day of his wrath will break forth like a confuming fire, in a time when it is not looked for. As he faid, fo he will do; "For," faid he, "I am a jealous God, " visiting the sins of the fathers upon " the children, unto the third and " fourth generation of them that hate " me; and shewing mercy unto thou-" fands of them that love me, and "keep my commandments." So it is plain the Lord is equal in all his ways: for, concerning those that are the off-spring of that hard-hearted, wicked, and perverse generation, that persecuted and shed the blood of the innocent servants of the Lord, if they do but

but turn to him with their whole hearts, fo as to love him, and keep his commandments, they will furely find mercy: but, if they continue in a state of rebellion, and hardness of heart, and sin against his light and good spirit in their hearts, as did their fore-fathers, he will visit them with his judgments for their iniquities; and for the sins which they and their fore-fathers have committed, he will pour forth the cup of his indignation without mixture.

After those yearly meetings, we, with several friends, went towards the yearly meeting at Dover, and Cochea, taking several meetings in the way, as at Ipswich, where no friends lived; but we got leave to have a meeting in their court-house. It was disturbed by a man standing up, when I was in testimony, who said, that I struck at the foundation of their principles. He was a very hot man, and held the doctrine of absolute predestination. I told him, Truth struck at the unfound foundation; but, as he was in heart heat and anger, not fit to dispute about religious matters, he fat down, and a woman sharply reproved him for his rude behaviour, she being grieved that the meeting should be disturbed; for it was in a good frame. Several of the people, I believe, were ashamed of his conduct. After a little filence, a friend stood up, and had a good opportunity. Then I had to clear myself of what was upon my mind, and the people being still and attentive, the meeting concluded well. The man who had opposed me shrunk away, and I saw him no more, though I looked for him, and in coolness thought to have had a little further discourse with him. That night we went to Newbury, where we had a meeting, much to my comfort and fatisfaction. meetings also at Amesbury, Hampton, and Dover. Friends had been forely wounded and scattered in their minds hereaway, by an unftable spirit. Those yearly gatherings were large, and I hope tended to the honour of Truth. We went next to Barwick, and had feveral meetings there; travelled through the

the woods to Casco, where we had an opportunity with friends, and such as attend their meetings.

We croffed the Bay to Small Point, and in our return had a meeting upon a neck of land called Meryconeague. The meeting at Small Point was the northermost settlement of friends upon the continent. We returned by Boston, having feveral meetings in our way; and from thence to Pembroke, Sandwich, Yarmouth upon Cape Cod, Suckanessit, Wood's Hole, and thence took passage to Nantucket. We staid upon the island about a week, visiting friends in their families, and had feveral publick meetings with them. It was an exercifing time to me, finding the true feed, or life of religion furfering much, by reason of strife and divisions. I left them forrowfully, because I thought the root of bitterness was not removed, though I was comforted in feveral meetings among them with the shedding abroad of divine favour, which strengthened me in the discharge of my duty; and indeed there there is a living remnant still among them, which I charitably hoped would be preserved in the innocency and sim-plicity of the unchangeable Truth. Several Indians were there, natives of the island. I had a defire to have a meeting among them, and acquainted them with it, which they freely confented to; and at the time appointed their priest was waiting for us, with his meeting-house doors open, and said, he would have me go up into the place where he used to preach. I told him, I chose to sit below with my friends. I had a living open time among them, to fet forth the necessity there was for them to turn their minds to the grace of God in their own hearts, a measure whereof they, as well as a measure whereof they, as well as others, had received, according to the Apostle's doctrine; which, if they gave good heed unto, and yielded obedience, according to the manifestation thereof, would bring falvation. The meeting ended in prayer and praises to Almighty God for his great mercy and loving-kindness to mankind, in sending his Son to be a light to allight to ing his Son to be a light to enlighten P 2 the the Gentiles, and for his falvation to the ends of the earth. Solidity appeared in their countenances, and they behaved with fobriety, very becoming the occasion of our affembling together. I should be glad there was more of it to be seen among those that profess Christianity.

We parted with them in the love of the Gospel, which I selt in my heart towards them. The wind coming fair, we took our leave of friends, and went on board a vessel, a friend named William Hussey being master. In the evening of the same day we landed upon an island called Martha's Vineyard. We quartered at a man's house that called himself by our name, and I thought he had some zeal for Truth, and the promotion of it; for after he understood we had a desire to have a meeting, he hastened and called in his neighbours, and a solid good time we had together.

The next morning, being favoured with a fair wind, we croffed the Sound to Dartmouth, and landed nigh the meeting-house, where we met with several friends, who had attended the quarterly meeting. The meeting ending that day, we had a confirming tweet opportunity together, in waiting upon the Lord before we parted with them, . and those that came from Nantucket. Next day we got to Fuerton, and in the evening had a good opportunity at the house of Abraham Barker with the friends that lived thereabouts. To this meeting came the negro man I mentioned before. He told me he had been visiting some of his own colour, and was returning to Newport, where he lived; but in his way he faid, he thought he must go by Abraham Bar-ker's, though out of his way, not knowing we were come from Nantucket. When he faw us, he feemed to be almost overcome with joy, and was of fervice to us; for we wanted to fend formebody over the Bay, either that night, or early next morning, to appoint a meeting for us at Portsmouth upon the island; and none readier and more willing than poor Cæfar; for for he was ftirring so soon in the morning, that he gave full notice up and down the island. So we had a large gathering collected in due time, though the time to give notice in was fo short, and feasonable advice was handed forth. From thence we went to Newport with our friend Thomas Richardson, with whom wehad lodged when there before, and were at their monthly meeting; we staid with them also on first day. Our meetings were richly favoured with the free extendings of divine power and wifdom; so that I was truly thankful I had been helped to get through the various difficult paths I had to tread in this unstable part of the world.

On fecond day we left Newport, and croffed the river to Canonicut Island, where a meeting was appointed for us; wherein we were well refreshed together, and the conclusion was in prayer and supplication for each other's growth, preservation, and establishment in the blessed Truth. We here parted with some friends of Rhode Island, under under a fense of divine favour, and in the uniting love of the Gospel, which had caused us to be near one unto another. Then croffing the river upon the main land, we had meetings at Kingwood, Peries, Richmond, and Hopkinton, and so passed through Naraganset, till we came to Westerby Lower, the last meeting in those parts we had to visit. We took our leave of those friends that accompanied us in great good will; then travelled through the lower part of Connecticut government, croffing many rivers, and the weather extreme cold. It was hard for me to bear; but praises be to the great Name, I was preserved in health, and my natural strength did not at all fail.

When we had travelled hard about three days, we came again among friends; and on fixth day had a meeting at Inomarance. It was to me a good time; for the bread that refresheth the hungry soul was broken. We then crossed over to Long Island, and were at the meeting at Flushing on first day, the twentieth of the eleventh month. On third day we had a meeting at Cow-neck; on fourth day at Westbury. Lukewarmness and indifference had much prevailed in many places among the professors of Truth. I had often to bear my testimony for the bleffed Truth against earthlymindedness, and all the deceitful and false coverings of the slesh, which had been the cause of it. I returned back to Flushing, in order to be at their quarterly meeting, which began on feventh day for ministers and elders. It was attended with a degree of divine favour, to the comforting of our fouls. Those meetings were meafureably bleffed with the presence ofthe great and good Master of our assemblies, and his voice was heard by fome, to speak as never man spake; and we had to conclude in humble fupplication to him for his help, and the continuation of his mercy, in visiting and turning the hearts of his people to himself. I then visited the meetings upon the island, which I had not yet been at, and had meetings at Rockway, way, and again at Westbury monthly meeting, where I was closely exercised on Truth's account; but was helped to clear myself of what lay upon my mind, and came away easy.

I then went to Bethphage, and had meetings also at Sickatauge and Oisterbay, where there had been a large meeting, but now much declined; yet we ing, but now much declined; yet we had a large meeting, accompanied with Divine Power, to my great comfort. On first day I was at Jericho. The meeting consisted of several hundreds of people, who heard the Truth declared with great attention, the power of it being over all, to the praise of Israel's God. Passing through New York, I staid their meeting; then crossed over by way of Staten Island, to Raway in East Jersey, where I had a meeting with friends, and some others that with friends, and fome others, that came in, to the edification and comfort of feveral, myself in particular; being therein strengthened and encouraged to go forward in the future service I might be engaged in. We lodged at Joseph Shotwell's, and on fixth day had a meeting at Plainfield. It was but small, by reason of short notice, yet favoured with the overshadowings of divine favour; for which our souls were inwardly bowed to the Father of all our mercies.

I rode to Whipiney on feventh day to the quarterly meeting, which began on first day. It was a good satisfactory time with us. I staid there on second day, and was at the preparative meeting, which was fatisfactory, divers things being opened and delivered in the pure wisdom concerning the things of God, and the good order established in his church. I had fome good feafonable opportunities in some friends families; and on third day had a meeting at Rockway appointed for those of other focieties; which was to good fatisfaction. On fourth day we went to Great Meadows, where we had a meeting with the friends there, amongst whom is a living remnant. We were made to rejoice together, in a true sense of the shedding abroad of Divine Love in our hearts. On fifth day I went to King-

Kingwood monthly meeting. I had fome fervice there for Truth, in recommending to the good order of the Gospel in each branch of our Christian discipline; which I observed to be much wanting among them. On fixth day I had a meeting at Amwell, at the house of Gershon Motts. It was an open time, Truth in a good degree prevailing. On first day had a meeting at Croswick's; a close searching time it was, many states being opened in the love of the Gospel. On second day I was at a meeting at Freehold, in which I was largely opened in the free extendings of divine favour. On third day, the nineteenth of the twelfth month, I had a meeting at Upper Springfield. I was led to the states of the people in a close manner, and the meeting ended well. On fourth day I had a meeting at Old Springfield. It was an edifying and good meeting, Truth having the dominion, to the praise of Israel's God. On fifth day I went to Little Egg Harbour, and had a meeting there next day, in which

I was enabled to clear myself in a good degree, and came away easy.

We croffed the river in the evening to Great Egg Harbour. The weather being very cold, and having much ice, our journey was attended with fome difficulty; but we got well over the river, though in the night, to Great Egg Harbour, and lodged at Robert Smith's, an ancient friend, who, with his wife, entertained us very kindly. We had a meeting there on feventh day, held at a friend's house, by reason of the extreme cold feafon. We had a folemn comfortable time together, and after meeting rode to the other meeting, along the Bay shore, towards Cape May, which was on first day, the twenty-fourth of the twelfth month 1758. It was a close exercising time with me. The frost was so sharp, we could not cross the Bay to Cape May, but were obliged to ride round to a bridge, where we crossed the river; which was about forty miles out of the way, and being strangers to the road, we met with much difficulty through through the wood, and there was no beaten path to be seen for some miles. I saw that the friend, who pretended to be our guide, was going wrong, and told him, if we took that course, it would lead us much out of the way; for I was very uneasy. Upon which he took out his compass, and finding it so, altered his course to that which I thought lay towards the road. I then found my mind quite easy, and said, I thought we should soon find it, which so happened. I said not much to the friends, but was thankful to the Lord, to find he was pleased to draw my mind towards the way we wanted to go.

Night coming on, with much rain, we lodged at a tavern, and next morning got to William Townsend's, where we had two meetings to pretty good satisfaction. On seventh day we rode about forty miles to John Reives at Greenwich, were at the meeting on first day, the thirty-first of the twelfth month, and had good service for Truth. In that place there is a promising appearance, among the youth, of the prosperity of Truth. Second day, the first of the first month, we had a meeting at Aloway's Creek, which was attended with good; I being helped beyond my own expectation. On third day I had a meeting at the head of Aloway's Creek, where I was led to feveral flates in a close manner, and came away much refreshed in the Lord: praises be to his great Name for evermore! I had a meeting at Salem on fourth day, there being a marriage, and the new wine was handed forth, which made feveral rejoice under a fente of divine favour communicated unto our fouls. On fifth day I had a meeting at Pile's grove. It was large, feveral of other focieties being there, I was opened in the free extendings of Gospel love to their souls. It was a good time to many, magnified be the God of our falvation! On fixth day I had a meeting at Woodbury, which was a folid good time.

The fixth of the first month I went to Haddonfield, and lodged at the widow Eastaugh's, where I was very kindly kindly entertained. On first day I went to Evesham meeting, where I had been before, and had service for Truth in the love of the Gospel. Haddonfield monthly meeting being on second day, I staid there, and had an exercise on my mind for the honour, promotion, and prosperity of the blessed Truth, and that all might act in the wisdom, power, and life, and might know self kept down by the power. I rejoiced I was at this meeting, Truth favouring, and the Lord's power being over all. I was made thankful in my heart to the great Author from whence all our blessings flow.

I went to Philadelphia on third day, but finding my mind drawn towards the Eastern shore of Maryland, I set out again on fifth day, the eleventh of the first month, and reached Wilmington that night. I lodged at William Shipley's, when at Wilmington, and having seen his wife Elizabeth, when in Old England, in the service of Truth, the remembrance of which had often been revived upon my mind, as believing believing her to be a mother in Ifrael, and a fanctified veffel fitted for the mafter's use, I could not but rejoice to see her again, and find her alive in the Truth, now in her declining years. Our next meeting was at the Head of Sassafrass. It was a hard time with me the fore part of the meeting; yet I came away well satisfied, Truth favouring towards the conclusion, to the honour and praise of Israel's God. After meeting I went home with Joshua Vansance, where I lodged.

The next meeting was at Cecil. I was exceeding poor and low, and deeply exercised in my mind, but was helped over all, and beyond all thought and expectation of my own; for I think, I may say in sincerity, I had no trust nor considence, save in the Lord alone, who hitherto hath been my rock, and my strong tower, my sure helper in every needful time. May I, with all mine, put our trust in him, hath often been the earnest prayer and supplication of my soul. I had a meeting at Queen Ann's, which ended well, the Lord's power power being felt among us, to our comfort. I lodged at —— Furner's, where we had a meeting with the family, and feveral others who came in. I hope it might tend in some degree to fiir up the careless, and warn the unfaithful. The twenty-first of the first month I had a meeting at Tuckaho. It was small, but attended with good, the Lord favouring us with his presence, according to his gracious promise.

On first day I crossed Choptank River over to Marshy Creek, and was at their meeting. I was much comforted, and had peace in the discharge of what I believed to be my duty; though I travelled in great fear, and much weakness at times. I was at Choptank meeting on second day, which was silent; yet I came away easy, with sweetness upon my mind, having been strengthened in my silent waiting. I had a meeting on third day at the Three Havens, where I was sensibly affected with the states of those that were not willing to take up the cross to their corrupt wills and incli-nations; and had to bear testimony against unfaithfulness, disobedience, truth-breakers, and such as brought dishonour upon the Truth, and our holy profession. I felt the love of the Goipel flow freely, even towards the backfliders; and in it warning them, I came away fweetly comforted in my fpirit. Fourth day I went to the Bay fide, where we had a meeting, on fifth day, with a few lukewarm professors. I had to exhort them to more diligence in keeping up their meetings, and waiting therein, that they might know the renewing of strength in the Lord, and be enabled to worship him (as he is a Spirit) in Spirit and in Truth. On seventh day I was at the quarterly meeting of ministers and elders at Three Havens, where I had some ferries for Truth. vice for Truth. On first day I was again at Tuckaho meeting, Truth favouring, in the love of the Gospel, many divine truths were opened to the edification and comfort of our fouls; and ended in humble suppli-cation and prayer to Almighty God for

for his help, strength, and preserva-tion in the way of truth and righte-ousness. On third day I was at Three Havens, at the quarterly meeting, where several friends had good service for the Truth, in the love of which we were comforted together in the Lord, and helped to bear testimony against those things which are crept in by reason of unfaithfulness among the professors of Truth. On fourth day, the thirty-first of the first month, I, with several friends, went towards Lewis Town. On fixth day had a meeting at Cold Spring, where is a poor company of indifferent lukewarm profesfors. On seventh day I had a meeting at Motherkill, which was pretty large, and attended with the shedding abroad of divine love to the people.

I was at Little Creek on first day, where we were comforted together in the Lord. Here is a promising prospect among the young people of the prosperity of Truth. I was at Duck Creek meeting on second day, which was fmall, yet a living open time to feveral. Thence I passed to George's Creek, where I had a meeting; and fo to Wilmington, where I met with Samuel Spavold, who embarked for England on fifth day, the eighth of the fecond month 1759. I staid the monthly meeting, which was that day, in which I was largely opened to the states of several, things being much out of order, by reason of a difference which had happened among them. came away I thought clear, and eafy in my mind. On feventh day, the tenth of the fecond month, I was at Concord quarterly meeting for minifters and elders, which was folid, and much good advice was handed forth. On first day I was at Kennett, and had large openings to the people, in the free extendings of the line of Truth's way. On 2d day was again at Concord quarterly meeting for worship and discipline, in which Truth's testimony went forth against disorderly gainsayers, and libertine spirits. I had a word of comfort and confolation also to the weak feeble mourners in Zion. Things closed closed well, and we parted refreshed in the Lord. On third day I was at a meeting at Providence, held for young people chiesly; it was to good satisfaction, and ended well. On fourth day, the fourteenth of the second month, I had a meeting at Birmingham. I felt the Lord was with us, helping and making way by his own power; praises be to his great Name for ever!

After meeting, we croffed the river called Brandywine, and went to my kind friend William Harvey's, where I was kindly entertained. On fifth day, the fifteenth of the fecond month, I had a meeting at Center, in Newcastle county. I was glad and thankful in my mind, to feel myself fully given up to what the good hand was pleased to give forth, either to speak, or be silent. On fixth day I had a meeting at Ocessan, which was pretty large, and in degree favoured; yet could not say I rejoiced, for in that place I felt the seed suffered, as well as in many other places, where my lot hath been cast of late; especially among the elders, and those that should be the foremost rank in religion. I could not help mourning in secret, at times, under a sense of the relapsed state of the church of Christ in many places. How departed from the innocency and fimplicity, and decking herself with her own ornaments of felf-righteoufness, and also stained and spotted with the world, and the filth of the flesh! On feventh day I was at the meeting for ministers and elders, held at London Grove for that quarter, and also at their meeting on first day, which was bleffed with the company of him that dwelt in the bush; for his sacred fire was kindled in our hearts, with living defires, that the mount of Esau might be confumed. On fecond day (after a folemn humbling feafon together, in true spiritual worship, which ended with thankfulness and living praises to Almighty God) the affairs of the church were carried on, and transacted in brotherly love, and condescension towards one another. had also a comfortable and confirming time time together on third day, at our farewell meeting, which being a fresh seal of the Father's love, and continued regard for his church and people, in uniting and making us to rejoice together in him, it will remain, I hope, upon many minds, with gratitude to the great Giver of every good gift.

Whilft I was here I lodged one night at John Smith's, an ancient friend, who had kept his place well in the Truth, and also at Joshua Pussey's, a good solid friend, who had a hopeful offspring. Hence I went to West Caln, and lodged at George Singular's, and was at the meeting on fourth day, the twenty-first of the second month. It was an exercising time with me, yet I could not say but I thought Truth had the dominion. After meeting I crossed Brandywine, and went to East Caln, and was at the meeting on fifth Whilft I was here I lodged one night Caln, and was at the meeting on fifth day, the twenty-second of the second month, which proved an helpful edifying season to many. I went after meeting to Downing's Town, and had an evening meeting at a friend's house, which was thought by fome to good fervice. On fixth day I had a meeting at Nantinil, after which I felt eafy in my fpirit, notwithstanding I had close and hard labour. On seventh day I had a meeting at Pikeland, which was a watering time, for the Lord hath a living seed in that place, which in his own time he will raise up to the praise of his own great Name!

On first day I was at Yougland meeting. It was large, and attended with a good degree of divine favour, which made it satisfactory to many, though not so open as at some other times to me. Our next was at the Forest, or Robinson's. I was much exercifed to recommend to an inward waiting, which by many professors is much neglected. Our next meeting was at Exeter. On fifth day we had a meeting at Reading, and afterward went to Maiden Creek. At Reading our meeting was in the town-house, or court-house, where several foldiers came, and many of the towns people, who behaved very foberly; the good power power of Truth coming over all, and prevailing, many minds were humbled and brought low. It was a good time, efpecially to fome of the foldiers, who were reached by the invifible power of Truth. The meeting ended in praifes and thankfulnefs to the Almighty, for his unspeakable favours; who is over all, worthy for evermore!

After meeting we went to Maiden Creek, where we had a meeting on fixth day. It was large, and to tolerable good fatisfaction. We lodged at Moses Star's. On first day we had a meeting at the Great Swamp. It was a living satisfactory time to several; and, in general, an edifying season. I dined, after meeting, at Morris Morris's, the husband of the worthy Sufanna Morris, and then rode to Plumpstead, where we had a meeting on fecond day, the fifth of the third month. The good power of Truth was also felt among us in this meeting, to the edification and comfort of our fouls. On third day I was at Buckingham monthly meeting, in which I was favoured voured with the pure life and fresh spring of the Gospel, which ran freely in the love of it.

Here is a large body of people in this province of Pennsylvania, the elders of which are too much in the outward court, which is only trodden by the Gentiles, or fuch as are in the spirit of the world; yet a young and rifing generation is here, as well as in feveral other places where my lot hath been cast, since I came into this land, whom the Lord hath vifited by his power, and good Spirit in their hearts, which, as they take good heed in yield-ing obedience to, and bring all things into the obedience of Christ, will crucify all their inordinate defires, evil thoughts, and imaginations, and enable them to bring forth the fruits of the Spirit, which are love, joy, peace, gentleness, meekness, long-suffering, and goodness: against these there is no law. I have often travailed for them fince I have been among them, left the labours of love, which have long been bestowed on thee, Ch America!

rica! thou favoured of the Lord! lest they should be bestowed on thee in vain; and thou, instead of bringing forth fruits to the praise of the great Husbandman, should bring forth wild grapes, fruits of the slesh, such as he can in no wife take delight in; and instead of a bleffing, draw down a curse, and provoke him to take away the hedge of his protection, and thou be trodden down and laid waste by the devourer; and for thy ingratitude, disobedience, and unfaithfulness to him, even command his clouds not to rain upon thee any more. But mayst thou never harden thine heart, and stiffen thy neck against so tender a Father, who hath fo long nurfed and fed thee; fo merciful a God, who hath often pardoned thine iniquities, though they have been as a thick cloud. He hath fo visited thee, in mercy sparing, and waiting thy return, that if thou return not with thy whole heart, his anger and indignation certainly will break forth against thee, and so as not to be quenched; no, though thou mayst make many prayers, and spread forth thine S 2 hands, hands, hands, he will not hear nor regard; inafmuch as thou hast hated instruction, and did not chuse the fear of the Lord, but hast set at nought all his counfel, and would not take heed to, nor regard the fecret reproofs of instruction in thine own heart. He will alfo laugh at thy calamity, and even mock when thy fear cometh; when thy defolation is unavoidable, and thy destruction as swift as the whirlwind. I humbly beg this may never be thy doom; but in order that the days of his mercy, and thy tranquillity, may be lengthened out, let Truth take place, that equity, justice, and true judgment, may run down in the ftreets of thine heart like a mighty ftream: then shall thy peace be as a river, or as the waves of the fea, that never can be dried up.

I was at Wright's Town on fourth day. It was an exercifing and low time with me, but I truft Truth did not fuffer on my account. On fifth day I was at Wakefield. It was aliving and precious time with us in the meeting, Truth's power prevailing to the dividing the word aright. The fense of which is cause of true thankfulness to the humble-hearted. I had a meeting at the Falls on fixth day, to so folid satisfaction; and after, rode to Brittol, and had a meeting on seventh day, the 10th of the third month. I was glad Truth in some good degree had the dominion. I staid the meeting on first day, the eleventh of the third month. This was a good time to us; the Lord's power was over all, to the praise of his own great Name!

On fecond day I had a meeting at Abington, in which I was favoured with the openings of Truth, in the spring of the Gospel, to the exhorting all to faithfulness, even the rebellious, and gainsayers; that they might come to know salvation to their souls through Christ. My next meeting was at Horsham, which was large; in which Truth savouring, it was made a precious time to many, as I then felt. On fourth day I had a meeting at North Wales, where there is a pretty large large body of friends; the fight of whom, in many places, and the fense of divine favour still extended towards them, was cause of humble thankfulness. On fifth day, the fifteenth of the third month, I got to Philadelphia, having been about nine weeks in this visit from Philadelphia, which I made my home, while in this part of the world, with the widow Rachel Pemberton, and her fon John, worthy friends; fhe a mother in Israel, and a great care-taker of the poor servants who have been fent, not only in opening the door, and kindling the fire, but in ministring every thing that she thought might be a help and service to them in their journey; for which, I am fully persuaded in my mind, she, with many others, will not lose their reward. "Inafmuch as ye did it to " unto one of those little ones" (faith our dear Lord) " that believe in my " Name, ye did it unto me."

The thirty-first of the third month I left Philadelphia again, in order to visit a few meetings in Chester county, where where I had not yet been. On first day I was at Providence meeting, which was a Trovidence incering, which was a good and fatisfactory opportunity, the flate of things much opened, and our minds in a good degree humbled, under a lively fense of divine favour. I was at Concord on second day. John Churchman also being there, was very helpful to settle the minds of some, who had gone into jangling about fome things which had happened among them. This being their monthly meeting, we left them to appearance in a pretty quiet frame of mind, and things ended well. After meeting I rode to-wards Hartford, and on third day was at Hartford meeting, which was well. On fourth day I was at Darby meeting. It was an exercifing time to me, things being much out of order, some differing in their judgment concerning what was, and what was not, confiftent with our religious principles in regard to military fervice, in which feveral had been meddling and concerning themselves, who go under our name. This brought great exercise and trouble on the faithful. A grievous refractory liberlibertine spirit I saw appeared; yet it was in a good degree kept down, and Truth, in some good measure, had the dominion.

On fifth day, the fifth of the fourth month, I was at Springfield. It was a large good seasonable opportunity to many. On fixth day I was at Newtown meeting; in which Truth's way was largely opened, and livingly fet forth in the power of it, to the humbling, and folid fatisfaction of many: a day to be remembered by the fentible. After meeting I went to George Mills's, where I had been before; a very kind friend. On first day I was at Middletown meeting. It was a large gathering, and Truth had the dominion over all; though many dry professors were listening and longing after words, which sometimes hath caused the living stream to be withheld for a feafon; yet the great goodness and condescension of a merciful God is wonderful, in that he is pleased to cause the living stream of the gospel ministry to issue and break forth in a wonderful manner, to the refreshing refreshing of his own heritage. The glory and honour, with living praises, be given to him, and that for evermore!

I had an evening meeting at the fchool-house, it also was an opportunity or good to our fouls, which were nity or good to our fouls, which were ref effect together in the Lord. Isaac Greenleaf of Philadelphia being with me, on fecond day, we were at Goshen meeting, which was attended with good; Truth in some good degree favouring. We lodged at Aaron Ashbridge's, and on third day had a meeting at Bradford. We were much hind day in our way by the waters being dered in our way by the waters being much out, and a friend was in great danger of being carried away, but was preferved. We got to meeting, though friends had been gathered an hour, or more. It proved a good feafon; the Lord had compassion on us, and caused his Gospel rain to descend on the thirsty ground, to the refreshing of that which was of his own right hand planting, and also to the placing judgment upon the unrighteous part, and all the fruits thereof.

thereof. I came away thankful in my fpirit to the Lord, for his great goodness to his poor people; because I saw his mercy and loving-kindness endure for ever.

On fourth day we had a meeting at the Great Valley, in which I perceived the extendings of good was offered, even to the gainfayers and rebellious: a mercy unipeakable! After meeting we went to a friend's house, with whom Margaret Ellis abides, and were at Radnor meeting on fifth day, the twelfth of the fourth month; in which, though I was attended with much weakness, I thought I had some service for Truth. On fixth day I had a meeting at Merion, which was not an unprofitable feafon, I trust, to several. I returned that day to Philadelphia, and on seventh day, with John Pemberton, I rode to Plymouth, and was at that meeting. On first and second day at New Providence. On third day returned again to Philadelphia, with some degree of satisfaction, and attended their week-day meeting, there being being a marriage. Several did rejoice under a renewed fense of the ancient power, and loving kindness of our heavenly Father's tender regard, in that he was pleased to cause his love and life-giving presence to be selt amongst us, to the refreshing the sincere and upright hearted. Glory and praise be to his great Name; for he is worthy for ever!

I staid in and about Philadelphia betwixt three and four weeks, in which time I attended meetings, as they came in courfe; and also paid several reli-gious visits to families, as I found my mind drawn in the movings of Truth: in all which fervice, though but small in comparison of some others, I found my spirit favoured with sweetness, and a degree of peace. Whilst I waited here, fupposing my service to be mostly over upon the continent, having paid a general visit, I unexpectedly, and pretty suddenly, felt a strong draught towards Barbadoes, or the West India Islands. I acquainted friends therewith, and made some essay for a passage, yet saw not my way quite clear; but in waiting felt my way open to-wards the Jerseys, and on the twelfth of the fifth month I, with John Pemberton, went to Mount Holly, and was at the two-weeks meeting on first day: and on 2d day at Morris Town, where a meeting was appointed for two friends, who were on their way towards Salem yearly meeting, where I was also with them. On third day John Pemberton left me at Ancocas-meeting, which was in a good degree fatisfactory, and also to the honour of Truth, the edification of the Lord's people, and the praise of his great Name! On third day evening I came to my worthy and well-esteemed friend Elizabeth Eaflaugh's, where I lodged. On fourth day I was at a meeting at Haddonfield; on fifth day at Woodbury; fixth day at Solomon Lipingcot's; feventh day at Piles-Grove. All these meetings, I thought, had a good tendency to the edification of the churches, and ended well. Thankfgiving and praife be to him that lives and abides for evermore!

The

The nineteenth of the fifth month at Salem began, where we were much comforted together, in the enjoyment of divine goodness. The free extendings of the Gospel-spring flowed plentifully, to the watering the heritage of God; the sense whereof bowed many with humble reverence, in praifes to his great and everlasting Name, who is worthy for ever! The twenty-fifth we had a meeting at Evesham, and went next day to Mount Holly, where also we had a meeting; on seventh day to Croswick's, where their quarterly meeting began for ministers and elders. On first day I was at Borden-Town, in the fore part of the day, and at Trent-Town in the evening; at which meetings we were measureably comforted. On fecond day I was at Crofwick's again, at the meetings for wor-ship and discipline, wherein Truth fa-voured us in a good degree. On third day the meeting was very large, and I was deeply engaged for the honour of Truth's cause, there being a loose libertine spirit amongst some who go under under the name of friends, yet never came under the yoke of Christ, to know the deeds of the body to be mortified; but live at ease in the gratification of their heart's lusts, and cause the way of Truth to be evil spoken of. My concern was chiefly to such as live at ease in Zion, and to the backsliders in Israel, yet I had a word of comfort to the mourners in Zion, and the heavyhearted in Jerusalem, that they might hold on their way. I was glad of so feasonable an opportunity, wherein I was led to speak so closely to the states of many, in true Gospel-love, which was as a feal of divine favour.

Upon our taking leave of each other, we committed one another to the Lord, and parted in great love, and true Gospel-fellowship. I then crossed Delaware at the Falls, in order to see my friends once more in Bucks county, where there is a large body, and got to my worthy friend John Scarbrough's on fourth day, with whom I had travelled several weeks both in the Jerseys and Maryland. I had great satisfaction in in his company, he being a man of a good understanding, a tender spirit, and very serviceable in the church. The quarterly meeting for ministers and elders began at Buckingham on fourth day, the thirtieth of the fifth month, which I attended, and also on fifth day a meeting for worship and discipline, and I thought different sentiments were getting in amongst them. If great care is not taken to keep to Truth's teachings, and the unerring guidance of it, which will fubdue and keep down all unruly spirits, there will be great trouble and uneafiness, if not separation, in many places: for I saw an evil spirit of diffention was got into the church, and in the ways of its workings, it appeared in divers shapes, in order to draw after it the hearts of the simple, and such as, like itself, are unstable; for it is an unstable spirit, and by this it may be known, and fuch as are led into its ways, and own its. workings. For they will be reftlefs, not easy, under the cross; but will cast off the yoke of Christ, and gofrom his teachings, meekness, and humility, humility, into a haughty proud fpirit, which is rough, full of hatred and envy, defpifeth counfel, and will not bear reproof. This fpirit, I thought, I perceived working in the mystery of iniquity; but its time is not yet fully come, to bring forth its monstrous birth. The Lord's mercy is very great to his people, for this feed of the ferpent hath hitherto been crushed, and put by, in its puttings forth; and the true feed, though through hard labour and travel, hath been brought forth into dominion, to the praise of Israel's God.

This quarterly meeting confifted of feveral hundreds, mostly a young generation. The gracious extendings of divine goodness was felt, and Truth's power did prevail over all the powers and spirits of darkness. I was glad I was here, and my spirit did rejoice in the Lord, the God of my salvation. After meeting on fixth day I went home with Samuel Wilson. On first day I was at Plumpstead meeting, which was attended with good, the power power of Truth prevailing. In the evening I was at a meeting nigh Buck-ingham, at a school-house. It was a large gathering, and we were much comforted and refreshed together in the Lord. I was at their monthly meeting at Buckingham on fecond day, the fourth of the fixth month, in which, through the prevalence and owning of Truth, which came over the minds of the people, things were carried on well, both in the time of divine worship, and in transacting of the affairs of the church; for the power of Truth kept down all restless and unruly spirits, which at times are putting up their heads in opposition to the testimony thereof, and are for trampling all discipline under foot. I was deeply exercifed in my spirit before the Lord, at times, that I might be kept in the innocency, meekness, and pure wisdom. Some being, as I thought, righteous over-much, I was afraid, left they should destroy themfelves, and so dishonour the cause of Truth, which they at times had fo zealously contended for.

U

After this meeting was over, I went to Wright's Town monthly meeting, which was next day. In this meeting I had hard labour and exercise; yet things ending well, I came away satisfied, and thankful in my heart to the Lord, for his unspeakable mercies. The Falls monthly meeting being on fourth day, I was there also, had some service for Truth, and parted with feveral friends in much love and tenderness, we not expecting to see each other again in mutability. On fifth day I was at Middletown monthly meeting, in which I was drawn forth, in the living fpring of the Gospel, both in the men's and women's meeting. Then feeling my spirit easy and clear, I left them in love, and the unity of the one spirit, which had united us together in a near manner.

On first day I was again at North Wales, and had good satisfaction at their two meetings. On second day I returned again to Philadelphia, having been about a month from the town.

On third day, the twelfth of the fixth month, I was at the Bank meeting, in which we were comforted together, it being an edifying feason to many. I staid in and about Philadelphia about four weeks, visiting some families, and attending meetings as they came in course, though, in meetings, I had little to say, being shut up, and much bound in my spirit to keep silence in that city. The cause is best known to the great overseer of his people, who can do with them as seemeth to him good: and I faw it was good for his fervants to be refigned and contented with all the openings and fluttings of his hand; with the various difpenfations he is pleafed to lead through, that there may not be any confusion throughout the camp of God's Ifrael. I could not but rejoice, in thankfulness of heart, that I was quite silent, and still in my spirit; being made sensible it was the Lord's own doings: and indeed it is marvellous in our eyes, that he, who is the captain of our salvation, should call for such a cessation of arms, for a feafon, that his foldiers II_2 might might take a little rest under his royal pavilion, and canopy of pure love.

I was at Darby week-day meeting the fourth of the week; on fifth day at Chefter week-day meeting; and on fixth day at Chichefter, where a meeting was appointed for me; which was large, and accompanied with the free extendings of divine mercy to our foul's refreshment. On seventh day I was at London-Grove monthly meeting; and also at their meeting on first day. It was a contriting and bowing time with many, and we parted in the true unity, fellowship, and heart-ten-dering love of the Gospel of Peace. On second day I was at Concord-monthly meeting, which was a hard, laborious, exercifing feafon, both in time of worship and discipline; things being much out of Gospel order, by reason of strife and discord, as opposite to the pure and peaceable government of the church of Christ, as darkness is to light. The evil spirit was kept down in a good degree, and that which was out of order much helped by the power of Truth.

The tenth of the feventh month 1759, I got to Philadelphia; the eighteenth, several friends accompanying me, we went to Chester, and the nineteenth on board a vessel, which was bound for Barbadoes. Sometime after we were got to sea, I was closely exercised in my mind, which brought me very low, in humble supplication before the Lord, that he would be pleased to enable me to go through whatsoever he, in the course of his infinite wisdom, might fuffer to come upon me, whether for a trial of my faith, or any other of his wife and good ends. For I could appeal to him in great fincerity, it was in obedience to his requirings, that I had undertaken that voyage; and not in my own will. This was indeed with me as a time of renewing of my covenant, and coming under a close engagement, that if he would but be with me, to deliver and preserve me in the way that I had to go, so that I might return again to his house intrue peace; then he should be my God, and I would serve him. May I therefore, with all the Lord's servants every where, not only make covenants, when under close and deep exercise of soul; but, Oh! let us be concerned strictly to observe and keep them; for I am a living witness for him, that he is a covenant-keeping God with his people.

Whilst I was under this living and fresh baptism, those, to whom I am the most nearly united in the closest ties of nature, were brought nigh to me in fpirit (though far separated in body) with strong desires, and servent supplications, that they might be pre-ferved in the Truth, and that the Lord, in his infinite mercy, would be pleased to visit their souls with a fresh visitation of his pure love. The churches also of the Lord (especially those people I had so lately visited, and had at times been so closely engaged for, in the love of the Father) were spread before me in the nearest manner, with fervent prayer, that they might abide in his love, love, stand in his counsel, and live in his holy fear; that so we might still be a people to his praise, and bring honour to his great and holy Name, and the profession we are making of the blessed Truth; that the blessings which he hath reserved, and laid up in store, might not be withheld, but plentifully showered down upon his heritage.

My mind now was much eafed, and that which had been as a load upon my spirit was taken away, and I was freely refigned to the will of God. At that time, if I rightly knew my own heart, the fear of death was also removed, and, I trust, the occasion of it, which is fin; for I did not find that my conscience condemned me, though I well know, I have nothing to trust in but divine mercy, through my dear Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ, in whom, and by whom, all our fins are taken away, and we are redeemed unto God, and that by his most precious blood. It is by him we also have access to the Father, his spirit bearing witness witness with our spirits, that we are his children, often crying, Abba, Father, through the eternal Spirit, which helpeth our infirmities, and maketh intercession for us; enabling us to ask aright, and pray in an acceptable manner.

I may not omit remarking at this time, when the French were nigh taking us, my spirit was so at liberty, and over them, and all the powers of darkness, in the Lord, that I did not fee it would be so, and having had great freedom and liberty in my mind to go in this same vessel, could not restect upon myself for missing of it in any respect, except it was in making mention of it sometimes too freely, which it is likely fome might lay hold of, and that not to their own advantage. When we were taken, the Frenchmen (confidering all their views are for plunder) did not use me ill. They took my little money, some of my linnen, and part of my other wearing apparel; but my bed and chest, with many other necessaries, they let me keep; which was of great fervice to me afterwards. For I was now in a part of the world where I was a ftranger, and no money of my own left; yet I do not remember I either mure mured, or repined at what had befallen me; or that any diffruftful thoughts rose in my heart, so as to trouble and oppress my spirit; which I esteemed as one of the most singular favours amongst the many I have received from the great and merciful hand.

The privateer belonging to Martinlco, we landed at a town called St. Peter's; great part of which was laid in affies about two weeks after we were fet at liberty, as I was afterwards informed. We were all had to prifon;
but our captain, myfelf, the mate, and a paffenger, were put into a little room, which opened into the prifonyard. I think it was about twelve feet fquare, and we upwards of twenty (if I remember right) to lie in it.
Before we left the place, my fellowprifoners behaved courteoufly and ciX villy.

villy, none of them offering me any abuse, though I had often to reprove, and exhort them to amend their lives. It was extreme hot weather, and our yard, where we had liberty to walk, as well as our lodging room, was ex-posed to the sun most of the day. They let me have my bed in the night next to the door and window for the benefit of the air, which was an advantage; but, alas! I had a great difadvantage along with it, for the tub in which we eased ourselves, stood very nigh me, and the wash and filth of the court-yard came through a hole in the wall, very nigh the window where I lay, so that oft in the night I was nigh fainting with stink, which the heat of the weather made very nauseous. The bread allowed us was pretty good, but almost every kind of victuals was loathsome to my stomach in this stinking unwholesome place. There were falt beef and pork for those that could eat them; but it being neither foaked, nor half boiled, I perceived there was but little of it eaten by any. My chief living, whilft there, was bread and water, water, fometimes a little coffee, but that was feldom, for we could not always get it boiled. Oatmeal mixed in water was what I often drank, it ferving also for food. The water they let the prisoners have, I believe, is very unwholfome, it being taken up below, where the negroes wash their clothes, and also where the filth of the town is cast in. Most of the prisoners, I perceived, were troubled with a lax; and I had not been there above two or three days, before I was taken with it; which, with the extreme heat, and unwholfomeness of the place, brought me fo low and weak, that it was hard work for me to walk about a little in the prison-yard; but I strove, and was helped indeed beyond my own expectation; for after we were fet at liberty from the prison, we were six days on board the vessel that set us upon the English island, in which time I think I fuffered more hardship than whilst I was in prison; for being very weak, and the weather still hot, close, and sultry, I could not abide in the cabin among the people, but was forced to lie upon the deck, where I could get air, though I was exposed to the night-dews, and gusts of rain, which we sometimes had; all which tended to increase my disorder. The French captain gave me the liberty of the cabin, and shewed me kindness in other respects. We were becalmed under the island of Guadaloupe, and came to an anchor in a cove, where we took in fresh water; but I went not on shore. I was informed there was a great mortality among the English soldiers; and many others, who went about business, were taken off very suddenly at this place.

The feventh of the ninth month they landed us at the island called St. Christopher's, where I found some kind friendly people; though the generality were very gay, light, and airy. After I had been there a little time, my disorder abating, I began to gather strength, so as to walk about; and I found a few here, who had some knowledge of friends, and their principles, by reason of their education. One Joshua Lawfon, a sailmaker by trade, a man of good good report among his neighbours, was willing I should have meetings at his house, he having a large room very suitable for that purpose. So I had several meetings, the town's people coming pretty generally, and several were reached, I believe, by the heart-fearching power of Truth, which opened unto them their states and conditions, especially some of the younger fort, who were tender, and very detheir eye and expectation began to be fo upon the poor weak inftrument, that I queried in my own mind, whether I should have any more meetings with them; for that spirit, which hungers after words, sometimes shuts up the spring of the true ministry; or it is withheld for a time on that account is withheld for a time on that account.

However, now about, it revived in my mind, that I had felt a draught of the Father's love towards the island of Nevis, when we failed past it, in our passage from Martinico; though I was told by one that knew the place (such was the conduct of many of the inhabitants) bitants) there were little hopes of get-ting a meeting, or being received there; but that did not difcourage me, I finding fomething in my mind that removed that obstacle out of the way. Therefore I, with Caleb Copeland, a young man from North America, took boat, and in a few hours arrived at Charles Town, the chief place on the issand. We took up our quarters at a tavern. The day following, being their general court, many of their inhabitants came to town, and the place where we were being nigh the courthouse, and the grand jury doing their business, and dining there, drew a prestry deal of company. Most of them pretty deal of company. Most of them, at their first seeing me, seemed as though they could hardly be fatisfied with gazing; but I endeavoured to keep my eye to the Lord, whose presence I felt to be nigh me in a good degree, to keep me still and quiet. So they had their full view of me, till their curiofity was pretty well fatisfied. They offered no other incivility, than flearing, Ishmael like. However, the grand jury, either out of kindness, or further further to fatisfy their curiofity, fent us an invitation to dine with them; but it being late before they went to dinner, our landlady ordered ours fooner. I did not find any thing in my mind against eating with them; though many of them be a light, vain, airy people, and their company not defirable to a folid mind.

They fent a messenger for us when they sat down, by whom I fent word we had dined. But they sent again, fo I went in, and told them we took their invitation kindly, but we had dined, and therefore defired to be excused from fitting down with them. They did not seem so light and airy now, as they did before; but said, they should have been glad to have had our company. I observed, they are very much in the custom of drinking of healths, as well as in using many other vain compliments, which I had to shew my dislike to, not only by not using them, but in letting them also know they were against our principles, and the apostle's advice to the believers.

lievers, where he faith, " Be not con-"formable to this world; but be ye transformed, by the renewing of your minds." I much defire my children may take notice of these little remarks, and put in practice that excellent advice of the apostle; not to be conformable to the world's language, vain customs, and fashions, which deface that beautiful image and likeness man was first created in: for every thing was good that God made, and had an excellency and beauty in it; man, the greatest of all, as long as he keepeth his commandments; but he loses that likeness and image of innocency, by hearkening to the voice of the ferpent, who is called the prince of the power of the air, that now bears rule in the hearts of the children of disobedience. I would therefore, my deár children, that you may come to know a being transformed by the renewings of the grace and good spirit of Truth, upon your minds and un-derstandings, into the nature, image, and innocency of the children of God, and fland in it, by keeping his commandmandments; for herein is man's perfection.

A meeting had been proposed to be held in the court-house, several seeming to forward it, especially an old priest, who bestirred himself pretty much; which I thought fomewhat strange. When it was nigh time for the meeting, he went along with me to the courthouse, where the justices and several others had dined, and had not yet broke up; but that was more than I knew before I went in. However, the priest told them there was a gentleman, as he was pleased to call me, wanted to give them a sermon, and requested that they would give liberty of the hall for a meeting to be held; but one whom they called their chief judge started up in a heat, and said they had not done: and besides, they wanted no fermons; as for his part, he never loved to hear one in his life. A vulgar and unfavoury expression to come out of the mouth of one in his station; and it made me, that I could hardly tell what to fay about having a meeting meeting that night, only as feveral of the people from divers parts of the ifland were there, it feemed a very fuitable opportunity. However, the old priest was not at all discouraged with the repulse he had met with; he being resolved I should have a meeting, went over to the tavern where we lodged, and got the liberty of a chamber, and then came and told me there was a convenient room, and feveral already waiting. I went, and found every thing in good order for a meeting, except the people's minds: I was also in great poverty, but I think quiet and much refigned. I fat in filence a confiderable space, in which time they were very restless, and rude in their behaviour, such as I had seldom feen or heard before: at length I had fomething rose in my mind to say, which reached, I believe, the witness of Truth in them; for they became very quiet and still, and sat like another fort of people; and many after meeting confessed to the Truth of what had been spoken.

I had another meeting at that place, and many came. It was a folemn bap-tizing time. The Lord's power had the dominion over all the rough and unruly fpirits: praises be to his all powerful name for ever! There stood up a man at the close of this meeting, and faid, he hoped what had been delivered would have a good effect; for it was very fuitable advice. More he faid, which is not needful to pen; and I thought it was in a good degree of fincerity. Then turning to me, he gave me a friendly invitation to his house. I told him I took it kindly, and should come if opportunity would ferve. The company being pretty much gone, he entered into a little difcourse with me, and told me, he himself was also a fellow-labourer in the Lord; but he had as little the look of a prieft, as any I had ever feen, as I thought. He told me also, he perceived that we had the advantage of them, in that we did not tie ourfelves up to one text of scripture, as they did, and so could speak to the several states of the people; for he Y 2 said faid, it could not be supposed that one remedy could be suitable to every difease. I made some remarks on his just observation, with something concerning the true ministry, the operation of the spirit, and that it was not to be limited; against which he made no objection, but freely affented to the Truth. We parted in a kind and friendly manner. I found he was a man of good understanding, bore a very good character among the people, and was well beloved.

This evening, after he was gone, there came a meffenger from one Burnet, a man of note in the island, to desire me to pay him a visit before I left the place; which I did the next morning. He received us very respectfully, without making much ceremony. He asked me some questions concerning my travels and usage amongst the French, which I gave him some account of. He did not seem to want to enter into any discourse about religious matters, but desired I would stay longer with them upon the island; for for he faid there were feveral who were the descendants of Quakers, and un-doubtedly would be glad to see me. But that did not at all induce me to stay, I finding myself pretty easy to leave them; hoping the Lord in his own time will send his servants and faithful labourers into not only this island, but many others in this part of the world, where the Gospel rain hath not been fo plentifully bestowed. Oh, Old England, and North America! Though these people are too much in the churlish dog's nature, yet many of them would be glad to partake of the crumbs that fall from your tables: Your dainty full stomachs have often loathed the honey-comb, and their poor fouls are wandering about upon the barren mountains of a lifeless profession, seeking the living amongst the dead. May we therefore, that have received the knowledge of the Truth, and been so often watered, be faithful, and bring forth fruits, answerable to the bleffings received! Then will the Lord, I am fully perfuaded, fend forth from

from amongst us such as shall bring them to Christ the good Shepherd and fold of true rest and peace.

But to return. After I had staid as long as time would permit, and was taking my leave of the man, he put a parcel of money into my hand, which I returned, and told him that we did not receive any money for preaching. He faid, we could not travel without expences, and I had been taken by the French, and had fuffered fome lofs, and as he gave it me freely, I might receive it. I told him, I was not then in necessity, therefore was not free to take it; but acknowledged it was his good will, and fo took my leave of him. After I had been a little time at our inn, we understood he had sent his fervant to the landlady, to charge her to take nothing of us, for he would pay all our expences; but it was al-ready paid; and I faw it to be highly expedient for us, to remove all cause from them that might take occasion, that the ministry might not be justly blamed. I left them in a loving good disposition of mind towards triends, and am fully persuaded there are hungerings begotten in the hearts of some of them after the true bread.

After I returned to the island called St. Christopher's, where I had taken lodgings, not knowing how long I might ftay, I was not easy to omit having meetings, especially on first days. Several people coming out of the country, I had freedom to fit with them, most of them behaving in a becoming and folid manner. Truth sometimes favoured us in time of silence; and though I had thought I should have been thut up, I found the fpring of the Gospel was still opened towards the people, at times, in the free extendings of God's love. And it came into my mind, in the opening of Truth, that the Lord hath a feed fewn in those islands, which lies under the clods of the earth; but its rifing and coming into dominion must be lett to his time; he being able to dethrone antichrist, bring down his kingdom, dom, with all his ftrong holds, and in the room thereof, to establish his own everlasting righteousness; that so in the very place where it was said, they are no people, there shall they be called the children of the living God.

I found fome of them defirous that I would visit them in their families, which I complied with, as I found freedom; often having to fet before them their unchristian practice, in keeping their fellow-creatures in flavery for term of life, and the cruelty they used towards them, which exceeded all that I had ever seen before; and it raifed fuch a just indignation in my heart, that I used great freedom of speech sometimes in conversation. Yet I trust I did not exceed the bounds of Truth, for I perceived it always had fome good tendency, either to filence, or bring fome acknowledgment from them, that the practice was unchristian, and not to be justified; that they had no right to plead for keeping them, but that of force, and they were a daily plague, and caused them to run into into a great deal of fin. Thus I have heard fome of them complain, wishing they had never had them, or had some other way to get their bread. So we may perceive the Lord is rifing, by his pure witness, in judgment in the hearts of those negro keepers, shewing them the practice is evil, and they cannot justify it, because the light condemns it, and maketh it manifest to them to be evil. I tarried at this place longer than I expected; but hope it was not time fpent altogether unprofitably. And although I have been hindered from going to the place, I at first set out for, I have had evident tokens of God's love and fatherly care over me, in the various steps I have had to tread; yet notwithstanding this evidence of divine approbation, I have not been insensible, that mouths would be opened not only against me, in faying I was wrong led, or under a deception, but also against the Truth; for the Truth hath many enemies, and none greater and readier to judge others, than those that are making a profession of it, but dwell not in the life and \mathbf{Z} power.

power. But it is not a new thing to be counted deceivers, and yet be true.

However, whilft I tarried here, I often enquired for a paffage to the windward islands, that such occasion might be taken away, and I be clear of the blood of all men. I thought by way of Antigua might be proper; but when I made fome attempts to-wards it, I was always stopped in my mind, not being free to leave the place where I was. But when I had tarried fome time longer, and had divers good opportunities among the people, I felt myself quite easy to leave the island; and not only fo, but likewife a strong defire to be gone; also that view, and those drawings. I had before, to visit the other islands, were entirely removed, and I was easy to return in a vessel which was then bound for Philadelphia. Therefore, taking leave of those I was pretty nearly acquainted with in Baffeterre, the chief town on the island, I went by land to Sandy Point, where the veffel lay to take in part of her cargo. Here I had a meeting with the town's people the day before we fet fail, which was the fecond of the eleventh month 1759, having been upon this ifland, and Nevis, eight weeks.

Whilst I tarried in those islands, there was a great mortality among the people, but it did not bring that awfulness and humility upon their minds, which it ought to have done; and therefore the divine hand undoubtedly will be firetched out fill. The captain and men behaved very civilly to me in this passage. I had several meetings with the ship's company, which had some good effect, I believe, upon the seamen. We arrived at Philadelphia the twenty winth of the largest. the twenty-ninth of the eleventh month, where I was very kindly received by my friends, who had, I believe, nearly fympathized with me in my late exercises. I staid in the city a little more than two weeks, except a fhort vifit to Wilmington friends. A confer-ence was held with the Indians whilft I tarried here, which I was at; and Daniel Stanton, and myself, with a Z 2 few few other friends, had a meeting with them at Philadelphia in the state-house.

After some time of waiting in silence, I had fomething to fay, and one Isaac Still, an Indian, who could fpeak English, delivered the substance of what I faid in the Indian language. He appeared tender and well fatisfied, being a fensible sober young man. Tedeuscung, and several of the Dela-ware chiefs were present, and a few of the Jersey Indians. They were folid, attentive, and behaved in a becoming manner. The meeting ended in hum-ble prayer and supplication to Almighty God. My stay being but short here, after I returned from the West Indies, I endeavoured to take my leave of friends in as general a manner as time would permit, and the fixteenth of the twelfth month 1759, being the first of the week, after a good and satisfactory season with friends at Pineftreet meeting-house, I took my fare-well of them in the uniting love and pure fellowship of the Gospel of peace.

I went on board the ship Carolina, at the wharf; the master's name was James Friend, a kind, courteous man. We had a very difficult paffage, by reason of high winds, and a leaky veffel; yet, through the mercy and goodness of kind Providence, we arrived fafe at London the twenty-ninth of the first month 1760, where I staid but a few days before I took leave of friends there, and returned home to my dear wife and children, who, in my absence, with all that I had, had been kept, bleffed, and preferved, far beyond my own expectation, or indeed my deferving as a creature. I defire I ever may be thankful for fuch unspeakable favours and mercies, and give him the praife, who is worthy for ever!

IN the course of these travels the author often had his wife and children in his remembrance, and wrote to them, to encourage them to trust in that hand which had drawn him into service.

By a note, dated the eighth of the eighth month 1768, on one of his letters, he defires that they might be preserved for the sake of his children: "When" (says he) "my" head is laid in the filent grave, and my foul at rest with the Lord: and also that my Journal may be transcrib-"ed for their perusal;" adding, "that the very fragments should be gathered up, that nothing may be lost." For the benefit of his furviving relations, and of mankind in general, the following extracts are inserted. They show the care he had for their welfare, when far absent, and bespeak the fervency of his love. The first was from France, while he was prisoner there, and is as follows.

Carhaix in France, the twenty-third of the twelfth month 1756.

Dear wife and children,

This comes to inform you of my welfare, and though outwardly confined, not having that liberty to proceed on my journey at prefent, yet I dare not complain, nor fay, the Lord is an hard mafter; for he, in his great mercy and matchlefs loving kindnefs, hath been a prefent help in every needful time, as mine eye hath been fingle to him, he hath supported me under the exceeding great exercises I have in this journey already met with. Glory and honour be to his great Name for ever!

I would that none of you might be cast down about me, but still trust in the name of the Lord; I am fully satisfied you will find it to be a strong tower, and as the shadow of a mighty rock in a weary land. And there is one thing I do greatly desire of you, that is, live in true love and unity one with another, and, as much as in you lies, with all men every where, and then the God of love and peace will be with you to the end of your time. I wrote about the seventh or eighth of last month, in which I informed you how I fared, and was in health; fince which I am removed to this place, a tolerable fituation, and provisions pretty cheap. I have a chamber to myself, and a good bed, being under no restraint, but have the liberty of the town and fields to walk in when I please. I hope to receive a letter from you in a little time. I most dearly and tenderly salute you, and bid you farewell.

W. R.

Philadelphia, the twenty-ninth of the fifth month 1758.

Dear wife and children,

I came here this day, having been fomething more than fix months in the fouthern provinces; in which vifit, though the journey has been attended with some difficulties and dangers, yet I have no cause to complain. I lacked for nothing, it having at times been made eafy, pleafant, and comfortable unto me in Christ, for whose sake, and the Gospel's, I have endeavoured to be given up, according to the difpen-fation of his grace given to me, in obedience to his will, in which I defire I may stand faithful to the end; and the same desire, at times, is strong in my heart for all of you that I have left behind, that you may be faithful to the measure and manifestation of grace given unto you. I am not without fear, lest some of my dear children, which are grown to years of understanding, should be, through unwatchfulness fulness and carelessness, drawn away into hurtful things. It drops as a watch-word for you to take notice of, which, if you do, and walk agreeable unto the bleffed principle of Truth, which you have heard, and, I trust, believed in, the Lord hath bleffings in store for you, will make you truly rich, and add no forrow with it. I should have no greater comfort at my return, than to fee it was your care and chiefest concern to be faithful to the Lord, according to the best of your understandings. This would be more to my comfort and folid fatisfaction, than for you to have abundance of this world; for they that first seek the kingdom of God, and his righteouf--ness, the promise is, that all other things shall be added. I often breathe to the Lord, that he, above all things, may be pleased to sanctify and cleanse your hearts from all fin, that fo he, who hath hitherto been the help, strength, prefervation, and deliverance of your poor father in his exercises and troubles, may in mercy blefs you all, and take delight in you, so as to tender your A 2 2 hearts, hearts, and favour you often with his power and living presence, is the sincere prayer of yours, in that love, that neither distance or length of time can separate.

W. R.

Newport in Rhode-Island, the fifth of the eleventh month 1758.

My dear wife,

These may inform thee and children, I have hitherto been favoured in a good degree of health and strength to go through the exercises and travels, both inward and outward, which have laid before me, for the sake of the gospel; in the discharge whereof, at times, I find great peace and inward consolation.

My time of stay in this land, at present, seems uncertain; yet I am ready to conclude it will be until another year; if sooner, I believe it will be acceptable both to you and me: if we be willing to wait in patience the Lord's time, he will be well pleased with us, and undoubtedly his bleffing will follow, which will make truly rich, and add no forrow with it.

I have received two letters from you, in which I had an account of your welfare, in a good degree, for which I am truly thankful to him that hath hitherto helped us, and preferved us. May he have the praife, who is worthy! His ways are all ways of pleasantness, and his paths are indeed paths of true peace, and his mercies and loving-kindness are towards all them that daily live and dwell in his holy fear.

May all my children learn the fear of the Lord, is often my earnest cry and prayer to the Lord for them. Then would they be preserved out of the evils that are in the world, for they are many, and lie close to their youthful inclinations, and if they give way to them, will draw their hearts from the Lord, and out of his holy fear, into into a loofe, wanton, and libertine fpirit, which I caution and warn them to watch against and beware of, lest they lose the bleffing, as Esau did, and the time come they may carefully feek it with tears, and cannot obtain it; for time is very precious, and ought to be prized by all. Some very young in years, when on a dying bed, have bemoaned themselves, and lamented their mispent time, the sense of which causes me almost to tremble, left it should be the state of any that fee or hear these lines read. Therefore I intreat there may be a turning to the Lord with the whole heart; and make no referves or excuses, but yield obedience to his holy will in all things, according to the best of your understandings, though through a great cross to your inclinations; it is the way to obtain mercy with God, and admittance into his everlafting kingdom of reft and peace, when time in this world or troubles shall terminate.

I dearly falute thee and our children in the love of the Father of all our mercies, mercies, desiring you may all dwell in his love, that so you may feel me to be near you in spirit, though outwardly far separated. The dead cannot praise the Lord, but the living; the fense of it at this time for his unspeakable favours to us, with many more of his dear children, whom he hath begotten into a lively hope, bows my fpirit. May we all be preserved under a living sense of this life, that when under a degree of divine favour, may be enabled to draw nigh to him, who knows all our wants, and put up our prayers and fupplications for each other, in a manner that will find acceptance, is the pathetick breathing of thine in that love that changeth not, including our dear children.

W.R.

Philadelphia, the twelfth of the first month 1759.

Dear love,

I have received feveral letters from home, which intimate thine and our childrens welfare, as to health, which gives me great fatisfaction, with defires, if it be the will of Divine Providence, fuch bleffings may be continued, and we truly thankful.

I returned yesterday from New England, and the eastern country, having been somewhat more than five months in that journey. Health of body is in a good degree still continued, and true peace of mind; for which I am made; at times, to bless that great and everlasting Name, who is over all, worthy for ever! I see I cannot enlarge, only recommend thee to that which hath hitherto kept and preserved, and still will, I am sensible, as we put our trust and dependence upon it. I desire thou, or any for more any of you, will not think me long. I shall, as soon as I am clear, hasten home; shall not conclude for myself, for I am not at my own disposal; yet seem to think I shall look homeward in a little time. My dear love to thee and children, sympathizing with you in great nearness, I dearly salute thee and them, in that which never changeth. Thine in the Lord.

W.R.

Philadelphia, the fifteenth of the fixth month 1759.

My dear wife and children,

I am in the perfect enjoyment of health, except some pain in my breast, which is now much better. It hath been a long time since I had a letter from England, but here have been but few ships from London this summer. I cannot conclude of fixing my return, I having had drawings in my mind to visit Barbadoes, and purpose taking the first suitable opportunity to embark for that place. There are only a few meetings in Barbadoes, so that my stry is not like to be long, except I have to visit any other islands. I may thus conclude at present, but leave it to that great and good Disposer of all things, that hath been my support. I may with gratitude and thankfulness fay, he hath been my present helper in every needful time. Oh! may our eye be fingle to him, he is good indeed unto all that put their trust in him; though great storms may rise, and clouds of thick darkness may appear, I am strong in the faith, the Lord still will be on our fide, as we are concerned to be faithful unto him; and if he be on our fide, who can be against us? I cannot enlarge much, but defire that you and I may be enabled to commit ourselves to his care and protection; for affuredly, a sparrow can-not fall to the ground without his per-mission, and if we be faithful to him, we are of more value than many sparrows; for, faith he, the hairs of your heads are all numbered. My earnest cries cries and fupplications have often been for your fouls welfare; I would not have any of you think too much about me, though I truft we love one another by the nearest bonds and ties of nature; yet when the love of Truth prevails, we should give up one another for the sake thereof; then in this world shall we be entitled to the hundred fold, which is true peace, and in that which is to come life everlasting. As a most affectionate husband, and tender father, I dearly salute you, and bid you farewell.

W. R.

P. S. I defire my children would not give way to accompany themselves with those that are not friends, for that hath been the ruin of many of our youth. Endeavour, at all times, to attend religious meetings, and also to learn and improve in reading and writing. I am asraid, lest you should not do well; then I shall be grieved and forrowful if I should live to see you again, instead of being comforted, and rejoicing in you.

Christopher's, the ninth of the tenth month 1759.

Dear wife and children,

These are to inform you, and all enquiring friends and relations, that I have great and good fatisfaction fince I arrived at this part of the world, in the discharge of what I have thought to be my duty, notwithstanding I have been exposed to some hardships, and have likewise been out of health about four weeks, but am now as well as usual, can travel, and have a good appetite. Yesterday I came from an island called Nevis, where I have had feveral meetings; and though I have thoughts of visiting another island or two, I shall not, I trust, stay long in these parts, except I am detained longer than I expect.

I have you all nearly and dearly in my remembrance, though I have been already longer from you, or am like to be longer than I expected; yet I truft we shall find it hath all been the Lord's doings, and as we patiently wait on him, shall find his ways to be ways of pleafantness, and his paths to be paths of true peace and joy in the Holy Ghost, and that his time is always the best time. I would that none might be too anxious and thoughtful concerning me, feeing the fame hand that drew me forth, is as able, if he fees meet, to return with me, and bring again to you in safety; and if not, let us not murmur nor repine, if it may but be with us, as it was with the apostle, who said, "To me to live is " Christ, but to die is gain." I cannot write much for want of time; the ship is nigh failing, as I am informed, but commend you to the Lord, as into the hand of a merciful Creator and tender Father, tender in mercy to all that faithfully ferve, worship, and obey him.

My spirit salutes thee and dear children, &c.

W.R.

Our friend having left no further account of his travels after this voyage, until his fecond embarkation for America, there is reason to suppose he travelled but little, except attending the yearly meeting in London, or fome short distances near home. But about the year 1764, he again found a concern to vitit friends in America. For this purpose he embarked, in company with Thomas Goodwin, and William Horne, who were returning home from a religious visit to this nation, and arrived fafe at Philadelphia, and proceeded through most of the provinces; but his wife dying during his absence, he, on account of his family, rather hastened his return, and embarked in a vessel bound for Ireland; from whence he came to London about the fourth month 1766, and foon after returned to Wainfleet, the place of his residence.

Of this voyage, he kept only minutes of the meetings he visited; fo that we are deprived of a particular account thereof.

After his return, he visited divers parts of this nation, and in particular the city of London, which he often hinted he thought might be the last time; but his love to the cause of Truth continued, and it was evident the fervency of his mind was as strong as ever.

He was a man of great integrity of heart, a lover of peace, and fought the promotion thereof, and had often a word of counsel to drop tending to edification. Not only at particular opportunities, but often, when absent, has he imparted of the goodness and mercy of the Lord to his foul, and also been helpful in counsel by letters. In one of the last I had from him, he expressed himself thus: "The sap of "life lies very deep in the root, and "that must be waited for in those "pinching times I have met with; and yet I have a comfortable hope raifed in me of late, that all would " be well in the end, the prospect of " which to me hath feemed exceeding " pleafant, and, if fafe, should much

"defire it might be hastened; but that is not my proper business to look for, or to defire the reward before the day's work is sinished. I have served a good master, but have ever looked on myself as one of the weakest of his servants; yet have endeavoured to come up in faithful obedience to his will made manifest in me, and in this now I have great peace, and an assurance of an inheritance that will never fade away, if I continue in the way of well-doing to the end of the race."

His illness was very short; he was taken with a fit of the ague at night, and next morning, about four, departed this life, the fixth of the fourth month 1769, and was interred in friends burial-ground the 9th of the same, at Wainsleet, aged about fixty-three years.
